Tydings Fires 2½-Hr. Blast At McCarthy From Floor

Challenges 'Hoaxed' Senate to Act on 'Vile Charges' Made In Publicity 'Dregs'

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Senator Tydings told the Senate yesterday it had been hoaxed and deceived by the "false and vile charges" of Senator McCarthy, and he challenged Senators to do something about it.

The Maryland Democrat, chairman of the subcommittee that investigated McCarthy's allegations of subversion in the State Department, appeared clearly to be asking for a motion of censure. He said, however, he would not propose one himself.

At the end of a roaring, almost uninterrupted two-and-one-half-hour speech, Tydings defied the Senate to show that McCarthy's charges were not "a fraud, a hoax and a deceit," and asked Senators to "search their consciences" for remedial action.

Day Long Awaited

For Tydings, yesterday was a day he had awaited for almost four months, when he filed his subcommittee's majority report on McCarthy's charges and told a packed Senate what he thought about them and their author.

It was one of the bitterest and most barefisted personal denunciations ever delivered on the Senate floor. Tydings gave back in two hours what he had taken from McCarthy in the form of an incessant personal attack, from March to July.

To the Wisconsin Republican's daily cry that Tydings' subcommittee had been "whitewashing" he said the record would show "who has been whitewashing—whitewashing with mud, with slime, with filth, with the dregs of publicity."

The attack, in which Tydings got more exercise in striding to and fro and gesturing than he would have in three sets of tennis, was accompanied by a showing of charts—later hung up to bedeck the Senate chamber walls—and desks stacked high with papers and phonograph records of McCarthy's speeches—the latter never played.

Bank Charwoman Glad to Get Rid of $40,000 She Found

Syracuse, N. Y., July 20 (U.P.).—An $18-a-week cleaning woman today said she was "glad to get rid of" the $40,000 she swept from the floor of a bank.

Mrs. Mary Sakowski told police she took the money home "because I didn't know what else to do with it." She notified police of her find this morning.

"We had a lot of fun counting it. But all night we couldn't sleep," she said.

Mrs. Sakowski, employed only a week by the First Trust & Deposit Co., said she found the three bundles of $10 and $20 bills in a teller's cage.

The bank said it was "just one of those things." It said it would reward Mrs. Sakowski but "to what extent we haven't decided."

Brief, But Heavy

Flash Floods Hit as Rain Sweeps Area

Flash floods hit Washington and its suburbs lat night in the wake of a brief but heavy rainstorm.

A child was washed through a 30-foot culvert in North Arlington but apparently was unhurt. In Alexandria a car was swept 100 feet by a flood crest.

Trouble calls kept police, firemen and utility repairmen busy for hours.

The Weather Bureau measured the rainfall at one and a third inches. At the Weather Bureau's station at National Airport, the downpour began at 7:15 p. m. and continued until 8:42 p. m.

Boy, 7, Dies Of Polio Here; Sister Now Ill

Hyattsville Fatality Is First Among Cases Contracted This Year

Charles Wilmer Pickens, jr., 7 years old, of Hyattsville, Md., died early yesterday at Children's Hospital of bulbar poliomyelitis.

His 3-monh-old sister Kathleen, was admitted to the same hospital less than 12 hours later. Her case was diagnosed as polio, but it has not yet been diagnosed as to type, hospital authorities said.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Pickens, sr., 3109 Lancer pl. Charles was admitted to the hospital early Tuesday morning. He was the first person in the Washington area to die of polio contracted this year.

On July 7, Harold Kogod, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kogod, 2219 Observatory pl. nw., died at Children's Hospital of infantile paralysis. He was stricken, however, last September 6.

The father of Charles said yesterday that the boy first complained of nausea Sunday night. On Monday, he complained of a stiff neck, but did not seem to be seriously ill until Tuesday morning.

The baby, Kathleen, had been "fussing" for about a week, but since she has started teething, the family at first attributed it to that, Pickens said.

Charles would have been 8 years old August 18. He would have entered the third grade at the Ager Road School this fall.

There are two other children in the family, Judith, 6, and David, 2. Pickens is employed as an accountant with an electrical contracting firm in Washington.

Meanwhile three new cases of polio were reported yesterday in the Washington area. Two were reported in the District: a 31-year-

Action Vowed To Halt Rise In Food Costs

Sen. Gillette's Probe To Start in 2 Weeks; Increases Assailed as 'Vicious, Unjustified'

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa), head of a Senate Agriculture subcommittee set up to probe high food prices, yesterday promised prompt action on what he called recent "vicious, unjustified and unpatriotic" price increases.

Gillette's denunciation of boosts on everyday necessities, such as food and clothing, came as his group was investigating milk prices in Washington and other Eastern cities.

His group will move at once, he said. He declared a "full-scale probe, carried on to the full extent of the committee's resources" will be started in two weeks. He indicated the committee would turn its fire first on meat prices, in view of recent jumps of as much as 10 cents a pound a day for certain cuts of pork and beef.

$1-a-lb. Coffee Seen

He indicated further that his committee was not yet through with its probe of coffee prices. Since a recent report of the committee was called back at the insistence of the State Department, coffee prices have skyrocketed, with new all-time highs being set almost daily for the past week. Some dealers in New York were predicting yesterday coffee will reach $1 a pound soon.

Other commodities that soon will be submitted to his group's scrutiny, he added, might include flour, bread, sugar, pepper and a whole list of items in everyday use.

Gillette's comments were in answer to a desire expressed by a witness before his committee, Senator Herbert Lehman (D., N. Y.) had just finished testifying in support of milk farmers in his constituency when he added that he hoped either Gillette's committee or the Banking Committee would look into price rises.

"There are certain interests who are responsible for these spectacular and totally unreasonable price rises that have come since the war situation developed," he said. "I hope they can be uncovered, and shown who they are."

Basil O'Connor's Daughter May Be Victim of Polio

Richmond, Va., July 20 (AP).—The 30-year-old daughter of the president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis was brought to a hospital today as a polio suspect.

Mrs. Sidney Culver, daughter of Basil O'Connor, was referred to Dr. Lee Sutton, head of the pediatrics division at the Medical College Hospital of Virginia, by her family physician in Winchester.

The tentative diagnosis of polio was made by Dr. John R. Troxell, of Winchester, who said Mrs. Culver has been ill "three or four days." Her condition is not believed serious, he said.

Navy Orders Air Forces Into Service

Army Alerts Groups In All Six Army Zones for Transfer To the Far East

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

All Marine Corps Reserve ground units and "several" Marine Reserve air squadrons were ordered yesterday to immediate active duty.

At the same time, the Navy called at least 13 air reserve squadrons into service and the Army announced it had alerted combat and support organizations in all six Army areas for transfer to the Far East. Army troops involved so far are all Regulars.

The call for all Marine Corps ground units followed closely upon a warning order which had alerted these commands late yesterday. It could not be learned immediately in what order the Marine reservists would be called or where they would be stationed for training.

27 Divisions in Guard

Although the Army yesterday had made no announcement about the imminence of an order inducting National Guard or organized resreve units, such a call was expected momentarily. National Guard divisions now total 27, of which 25 are infantry divisions and two are armored, and 21 separate infantry combat teams. These units are in varying states of strength and readiness.

The Air Force announced no departure from its announced policy of calling up for the time being only individual specialists. A spokesman said these reservists would be given about 15 days to wind up their civilian affairs before reporting.

In Washington, the Fifth Marine Reserve Battalion, numbering about 500 Greater Washington residents and commanded by Col. John E. Fondahl, a Metropolitan Police inspector, received its orders yesterday. A Marine Corps spokesman said it was expected the unit would be mobilized within ten days.

Major Condon May Lead Unit

It was not expected that Fondahl will be called to active duty at this time. Although he commands the battalion in reserve status, his rank exceeds that of lieutenant colonel, authorized for battalion command. Maj. David E. Condon, jr., battalion executive officer, was expected to take it into active service.

Fondahl is the police department's chief clerk and property clerk and its liaison man to the Dis-

Anxiety Felt For Gen. Dean After Battle

Rescue Effort Fails; 'I Got Me a Tank,' He Had Said; Aide Shot

With American Forces On the Taejon Front, Friday, July 21 (U.P.) Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, commanding general of the Twenty-fourth Division, was unofficially reported today to be missing in action in the battle of Taejon. Dean was last seen late yesterday fighting Communist tanks with a forward bazooka squad.

Dean and his men were reported cut off.

A volunteer rescue column of five American tanks and infantry forces was formed last night and sent into the thick of the fighting in an effort to aid Dean and his trapped bazooka squad. The rescue attempt failed.

Dean was last seen at a command post in embattled Taejon yesterday. He walked in with a bazooka squad, grinning broadly, and said:

"I just got me a tank."

Dean's interpreter was wounded in the shoulder and was brought back to the main American lines for treatment. He said he last saw Dean "fighting like a tiger."

The advance unit with which Dean was fighting was cut off from a planned withdrawal when Communist troops infiltrated the city and established strong road blocks along the only avenues of escape.

However, other Americans also cut off in Taejon have been working their way through the rice paddies and straggling into the main American lines all morning.

In view of this, American officers said there still was a good possibility that many of those caught in Taejon will be able to slip through Communist lines to safety.

Tanks Ran Through Convoy

Defense of Taejon Described By Group of Dispirited Yanks

By Homer Bigart

With United States Forces in Korea, July 20 (NYHT).—First eyewitness accounts of the Americans' stand-up defense of Taejon came from a tired, dispirited group of soldiers under Lieut. Milford Downey of Nocona, Tex., who had escaped early attempts at encirclement by enemy tanks and infantry.

They told a vivid story of how four enemy tanks with Red soldiers riding on them ran through an American convoy parked on the outskirts of Taejon. The tanks shot up several trucks and jeeps containing sleeping soldiers and then pressed on into the center of Taejon where they formed a series of strong points for the enemy infantry which earlier had infiltrated American lines.

Lieutenant Downey's group straggling up the empty road leading from the city was the only group of Americans to escape during the day. All attempts to run supplies through the city failed and by late afternoon it was obvious that the troops still holding out in positions northwest of the city would soon find themselves in an untenable position.

Retreat Began Wednesday

Sergt. Robert D. Ayres, of Rock Hill, S. C., said Lieutenant Downey's platoon began the retreat late yesterday afternoon when their positions at Yosang, 6 miles northwest of Taejon, were flanked by several hundred Red troops. "We found we were cut off," he said. "Plan A was put into effect—that meant we got word to withdraw. We shot our way out in a jeep that mounted a machine gun, bringing

Another Horse Sends Douglas To Hospital Bed

Portland, Oreg., July 20 (AP).—Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas entered a hospital here today, again after a bout with a horse.

He was kicked on the left shin a week ago during a horseback jaunt in the Wallowa Mountains. The injury did not respond to treatment and hospital care was ordered. His condition was not serious.

The justice was crushed under a horse while mountain prowling in Washington State last October, and he spent weeks in a hospital then.

Yongdok City Is Destroyed By Naval Guns

Reds' East Coast Port Wiped Out by British And U. S. Cruisers

Tokyo (Friday), July 21 (AP).—An American and a British cruiser have destroyed the East Coast town of Yongdok by gunfire, Vice Admiral Charles T. Joy announced today.

Yongdok is the city seized by the Korean Communists in an apparent drive on the supply port of Pusan approximately 95 miles to the south.

Joy, commander of naval forces of the Far East, said in a communique the two cruisers bombarded the town during the evening and night of Wednesday.

Yongdok is 25 miles north of Pohang, where the First Cavalry division has established a beachhead. Presumably Yongdok would be an objective of a drive from the beachhead.

An artillery liaison officer reported the results of the naval bombardment were "terrific."

Joy said large fires were started in Yongdok and smoke was still visible from the ships at sea 12 hours after the bombardment.

After completing this assault in close cooperation with shore fire control parties, the warships turned their guns on other military targets.

These were mostly road junctions pointed out by ground observers and attacked in the continuing campaign to choke off any further southward penetration of Red forces.

Joy did not identify the two cruisers. He said they were part of a task force commanded by Rear Admiral J. M. Higgins.

BULLETIN

Tokyo (Friday), July 21 (AP).—General MacArthur today reported the Twenty-fourth Infantry Division after withdrawing from Taejon now is blocking the Red advance to the east of the city.

He said eight Red tanks were knocked out yesterday by a large new bazooka for the greatest single day's bag of armor by ground forces.

The Twenty-fourth "which has fought a splendid delaying action against overwhelming odds since July 5 is making every yard the Red army gains increasingly more costly," he said.

Tokyo (Friday), July 21 (AP). United States troops have pulled out of strategic Taejon and have taken up defense positions 4 miles to the southeast, General MacArthur announced today.

A communique said the Americans withdrew at midnight. Fierce fighting raged before the 24th Division gave up this city of 150,000.

The Americans were forced to fall back because of flanking and infiltration attacks which left their positions untenable in the blazing city.

Attacked on Flanks

The Reds began ther push on the city with tanks and infantry behind an artillery barrage. They attacked frontally as well as on the flanks.

American supply lines into the city were brought under enemy fire by the infiltrating movement.

As the 24th Division fell back, the whereabouts of its commander aroused some concern.

Maj. Gen. William F. Dean last was seen late Thursday with a tank

Formula to Fight Germ Warfare Reported Stolen

Paris, July 20 (U.P.).—A French scientist today said that a formula to protect the world from germ warfare was stolen from his laboratory and is being offered for sale in Switzerland on the "espionage market."

Chemist Paul Frixon said he would press his charges "to the fullest" in the French courts and stated they would be aimed at a man of French nationality.

Frixon says he produced the drug because he was convinced the Russians will spearhead any actual military or atomic attack with germ warfare. He said it is a proved preventative against both germ and virus warfare.

He already has on sale on the French retail market a compound known as "B.Q.X." He claims it is more powerful than penicillin or the sulfa drugs.

Canada Asks Men To Join Services

Ottawa, July 20 (U.P.).—Defense Minister Brooke Claxton issued an urgent call tonight for men for both active and reserve branches of the Canada's three armed forces, imposing no ceiling on recruits.

"This doesn't mean that we expect another world war," he added. "It does mean that by being in as good a state of preparation as the resources made available permit, we will be doing our part to prevent war."

2 Area Soldiers Listed Missing In Korea Fighting; 1 Wounded

PFC. ROBERT V. ROBEY

SERGT. WILLARD J. SIBLEY

Two Washington area men were reported missing in action in Korea and a third was listed as wounded by the Defense Department yesterday.

Pfc. Robert V. Robey, 21-year-old Arlington soldier who refused to be discharged from the Army because he wanted to fight in Korea, was reported missing in action yesterday.

Also reported missing in action was Sergt. Willard J. Sibley, 38, whose wife, Mrs. Ethel E. Sibley, lives at 2712 Ontario rd. nw.

Reported wounded in action was Pvt. Gary T. Smallwood, 18, son of Mrs. Gertrude Ellen Smallwood, 1021 N. Taylor st., Arlington.

Pvt. Smallwood enlisted in the Army the latter part of 1949, and was almost immediately shipped to Japan. His mother is a nurse's aide at George Washington University Hospital. Smallwood, a member of the 24th Infantry Division, is a native of Arlington and attended Arlington public schools.

Robey, one of the first Washington area men known to be in combat in Korea, was scheduled to leave July 3 for the States and discharge.

Then his unit was strafed by Korean Reds. Robey got so mad he ignored a court-martial threat from his sergeant for disobeying orders and stayed in the fight.

Communist broadcasts claimed his capture once before, but he

Politburo 'Timetable' Revealed

War on U. S. by 1956 Planned By Soviet, Zacharias Writes

A former deputy chief of U. S. Naval Intelligence says the Soviet Politburo has decided to move against the United States before 1956.

Retired Admiral Ellis S. Zacharias makes this assertion in a book, "Behind Closed Doors," published yesterday by G. P. Putnam's Sons.

He says the Russian high command decided on war at a session of the Politburo that wound up at 5 o'clock in the morning of January 28, 1949. He writes:

"This strange nocturnal drama was described in a special intelligence report, to which we gained access, by one of the men who were present."

This informant, according to Zacharias, was a Colonel Khralov.

The book relates that some months after the January meeting Khralov crossed the demarcation line in Berlin and surrendered to an intelligence officer in the British zone.

Zacharias says the Politburo "actually drafted a timetable and fixed the flexible D-Day for the showdown sometime between 1952 and 1956."

Zacharias says the Soviet estimate figured that (1) the United States will experience a major depression between 1954 and 1956 and (2) the United States will then go to war to stave off the cataclysmic effects of this depression on its national economy and morale.

"To forestall this American move," writes the admiral, "the USSR is determned to move first between now and 1956 to occupy all positions from which a physical attack against Russia could be launched without actually engaging in open hostilities.

"The USSR, so the Kremlin planners calculate, could then lure the United States into a conventional land war at the end of an immensely long supply line across dangerous waters."

Appeal Is Predicted

Falls Church Loses Its Fight To Annex Fairfax County Land

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

A three-judge panel yesterday flatly rejected the Falls Church bid to annex a 10.75-square-mile chunk of its neighbor, Fairfax County.

Giving their ruling in hot jam-packed Fairfax County courtroom, the judges unanimously ruled that annexation "is not necessary or expedient."

In a short written opinion, the judges said they had taken into consideration "the best interests of the county, the city . . . and the needs of the area proposed to be annexed."

Minutes later, Falls Church Councilman Samuel E. McCrary predicted that "the council will appeal immediately" to the Virginia Supreme Court.

The ruling affects the lives of about 13,650 residents of the urban annexation strip to the south and west of Falls Church—itself a city of only 7500 persons.

With Judge Brown on the bench were Judge J. R. H. Alexander, of Loudoun County, and Judge Burnell Miller, jr., of Culpeper County.

They gave no detailed reasons for dismissing the Falls Church petition, indicating the case was lost on the basis of the mass of evidence and not on any particular point.

Falls Church argued that the land in dispute was almost wholly urban and homogenous, with the city, which provided it such services as fire protection, water, and school facilities.

The area should thus "be under an urban government" namely, Falls Church. The expansion also would broaden the city's tax base and make it more self-sufficient, attorneys argued.

City officials testified that Falls Church expected to spend more

U. S. Planes Attack Red Troops, Trucks

Tokyo (Friday) July 21 (AP).—American fighters and attack bombers struck at troop and truck concentrations in bad flying weather Thursday on the South Korean front.

The number of missions was 20, lowest in two weeks. But the Fifth Air Force reported satisfactory results in driving enemy troops to cover and on other tactical sorties.

The comparative lull followed flying circus attacks by British and American carrier-borne planes that destroyed 32 North Korean planes and damaged eight others in a 48-hour knockout campaign against the Communist air bases north of parallel 38.

The carrier attacks started after their planes had flown top cover protection over the U. S. First Cavalry Divsion's emphibious landing at Pohang and continued through Wednesday.

At least 50 enemy planes were caught on the ground and destroyed or heavily damaged by allied land and sea-borne planes in the two days up to the onset of bad flying conditions Thursday. The total destroyed to date was reported around 78. Allied plane losses were put at 37, most of them victims of operational hazards rather than enemy action.

Allied air officials indicated a belief that the North Koreans had been preparing to mount aerial support for their ground forces when carrier and land planes swooped down with strafing, rocket and fire-bomb attacks on grounded aircraft.

Oil Dump Near Kongju Hit

In Thursday's limited operations jet fighters hit an oil dump near Kongju, northwest of the confused Taejon front. Pilots reported driving enemy troops to cover in buildings with machine-gun squirts.

Delayed reports from a fighter base in South Korea said Mustangs flew 21 missions Wednesday and destroyed 15 trucks and three gun emplacements near Taejon.

Indications are that the Communists miscalculated the need for air power to support their tank and ground forces at the outset in the belief that they would be almost unopposed in their drive to the south. The entry of American troops and Allied air power since then has changed the tactical picture.

The carrier planes on their first missions over North Korea July 3-4 found only about 10 planes parked on the airfields.

The hunting was better Tuesday and Wednesday but only four planes were encountered in the air—four Russian-made Yak-9 fighters. Three were shot down, the fourth was a probable. All the others destroyed were caught on the ground.

18 Red Planes Knocked Out

Land-based F-80 jets from bases in Japan knocked out 18 Communist planes and damaged seven others Wednesday, the Air Force said, in tree-top-level attacks with rockets and machinegun fire. Most were found near Pyongyang, about 25 miles above the thirty-eighth parallel.

There were indications that new airfields are being gouged out of the rugged South Korean terrain to accommodate shorter-range flights for some fighter types. The mechanized First Cavalry carries bulldozer equipment.

Carrier-borne F9F Panther jets and fighters set fire to the Wonsan refinery on the east coast Tuesday in widespread attacks that reached across North Korea to the capital, Pyongyang.

Land-based F-80 jets destroyed 15 planes on the ground near Pyongyang while the carrier planes knocked at industrial, rail and power targets.

United Nations airmen in Korea on the basis of official announcements have taken a toll of 96 Communist aircraft destroyed.

General MacArthur announced in a communique Thursday that 78 through July 19. Today's 12:45 a.m. communique says 18 more were destroyed in another carrier plane strike in North Korea on July 20. United Nation air losses weer given as 37.

India's Press Hits U. S. Reply To Nehru Plan

New Delhi, India, July 20 (AP).—India's press today almost unanimously condemned U. S. refusal to follow Prime Minister Nehru's recommendations for peace in Korea.

Nehru meanwhile turned his attention to pressing troubles in his own backyard—India's two-year-old dispute with Pakistan over Kashmir. Pakistan's prime minister Liaquat Ali Khan was due in New Delhi today for conferences on Kashmir with Nehru and United Nations mediator Sir Owen Dixon.

The local press concluded that publication of Nehru's correspondence with Generalissimo Stalin and U. S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson meant the Indian leader's Korean peace efforts had ended. A Foreign Office spokesman declined to comment on this possibility.

Stalin had agreed with Nehru that Communist China should be admitted to the United Nations security council as a step toward a Korean peace. Acheson said the U. S. felt the Korean and Chinese questions should be settled separately.

The Indian News Chronicle termed Acheson's reply "another diplomatic triumph for Communism."

The United States note, which American officials had hoped would turn aside Nehru's proposal without exciting Asiatic disapproval, aroused only adverse criticism from Indian newspapers.

British Accuse Soviet on Peace Talks Report

London, July 20 (AP).—Britain accused Russia today of giving an erroneous impression of British-Soviet peace talks on Korea.

A Foreign Office spokesfan who make the charge said he could not give details without revealing more of the British-Russian conversations than he was authorized to disclose.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, described the talks today, quoting Britain as saying the British were bound by the Security Council's Korean resolution and consequently could not put forward and definite proposals looking toward a peaceful settlement in Korea.

This statement tended to give the impression that Britain was hamstrung by the resolution and could do nothing constructive toward achieving a settlement.

Tass did not report, as diplomatic sources here had done, that Britain approached Russia in the first place and asked Soviet cooperation in ending the war.

During this first exchange, Russia replied by asking Britain to say specifically what Russia could do to cooperate.

Sir David Kelly, the British Ambassador in Moscow, returned to the Soviet Foreign Office on July 11 with Britain's reply. As part of the reply, according to British sources, Britain said the North Koreans would have to retreat to the 38th parallel.

Tass, omitting this background, reported today:

"On July 11 Ambassador of Britain in Moscow, Sir David Kelly, old A. A. Gromyko, Deputy Foreign Minister, in connection with the Korean question, that the British being bound by the latest decisions of the Security Council could not at present put forward definite proposals on a peaceful settlement of the Korean question, that the British government considered that to put forward such proposals would be to go too far ahead."

The agency said Gromyko told Kelly the best way to settle the issue was to have it discussed in the Security Council, with the Chinese Communist government displacing the Chiang Kai-shek government as China's representative.

Kelly Visits Gromyko Second Time in Week

Moscow, July 20 (AP).—The British Embassy announced that Ambassador Sir David Kelly called on Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko tonight.

The embassy statement said the call was made to enable Kelly "to deliver the communication" to which Prime Minister Attlee made reference in his statement today.

It was the second time this week that Kelly has been at the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

(In Washington, a Defense Department spokesman said he had no report that General Dean was missing.)

Concern was felt in Tokyo that further withdrawals may be necessary.

The Communists to the east threaten by a southward drive to cut across the main supply routes to the Taejon area from supply bases such as the big port of Pusan on the southeast coast.

Taejon, a good communications center, had served for a time as both advanced American headquarters and as a refuge for the South Korean government.

There was every indication that the American retirement in the face of overwhelming force was orderly.

The withdrawal takes the Americans into the hills and away from the plains and rice paddies where superior Red tanks struck with such deadly effectiveness.

Taejon is another milestone in the valorous rearguard action which is being fought until additional United States forces can be brought to bear.

It is 90 air miles south of Seoul, the captured capital of the south Korean republic. Seoul was the first milestone.

Little more than 30 miles south of the border which divides North and South Korea, Seoul fell four days after the Communists crossed the border in force on June 24.

Planes Down Close

They loosed a new and effective big bazooka, a 3.5-inch rocket launcher. At the same time fighter planes almost scraped the hillsides shooting up enemy artillery units trying to fire on the American escape route.

The Reds lost at least 13 tanks Thursday from bazooka-firing ground forces combined with rocket-blazing Allied air assaults. Bazookas were credited with eight kills and airmen claimed five more tanks.

Numbers of North Koreans were shot down and at least three tanks knocked out in a determined enemy rush for American oil and munition dumps. A locomotive crew was ambushed by the Reds as it tried to reach the engine to haul more American supplies back to safety.

The battle ebbed and flowed in this fashion in heavy, confused fighting.

Fighters and B-26 bombers of the Fifth Air Force flew 76 sorties Thursday, destroying 14 enemy fighters and one twin-engine bomber. Marshalling yards at Kangyong and Chochiwon were strafed and several bridges near the two towns were destroyed.

Reds Move Southwest

While fighting reached a pitch around Taejon, the Reds threw a flanking force down the west coast and took the hamlets of Iri, Chonju and—apparently—Kumje, about 40 air miles southwest of Taejon.

The two new American divisions whose presence in Korea was made known Wednesday — the First Cavalry (mechanized) and the Twenty-fifth—were largely absent from battle reports today.

The cavalry division expanded its beachhead around Pohang on the east coast and presumably was cutting inland to get astride the roads leading south to Taegu, Pusan and the main American supply line.

The Communists again took Yongdok about 25 miles north of Pohang on the east coast after South Korean troops were forced out. There was no indication that cavalry patrols had reached this area. Whereabouts of the Twenty-fifth was unreported but it too was thought to be trying to help plug the roads to Pusan.

On the central front a Red force took Yechon on the Hamchang-Andong road but were driven out a few hours later with 400 casualties.

It appeared from this action the Reds were moving into attack position in small groups via secondary roads or trails, then assembling.

Red Oil Dump Fired

An Eighth Army spokesman said the jets set fire to a Red oil dump at Kongju, northwest of Taejon, and strafed buildings sheltering enemy troops.

A late report covering Wednesday said F-51s flew 21 sorties, destroying 15 trucks and three gun emplacements near Taejon.

A naval bombardment was loosed on Yongdok shortly after the Reds took the city. Several fires were started. The warships with their carrier planes then moved northward shelling, strafing and rocketing villages along the east coast highway where Red Korean forces were believed seeking cover.

Carrier based fighters also strafed gunboats at Wonsan and chemical plants at Sansong on the east coast. Water tanks and nine locomotives near Hangwon also were hit.

In a special communique Thursday General MacArthur said that when the North Koreans failed to follow up their first breakthrough on the Han River they lost their chance for victory.

MacArthur said he told the South Koreans to hold the Han at all cost to give him time to build up. They failed. He then committed American infantrymen piecemeal in a holding action. The gamble paid off and the Reds, he said, had lost their opportunity.

Green Troops Thrown In

MacArthur also said intelligence reports based on stories told by hundreds of captured North Korean soldiers showed the morale and training among some recently organized Red divisions was "startlingly low." Divisions were built up around a core of seasoned veterans of China and Manchuria fighting but had been filled in by draftees, some of whom had fired as few as three practice rifle shots before being committed to battle.

GIs Describe Taejon Defense

a truck along in the rear. Then we went right down the road toward the airstrip.

"At the first bridge we put up makeshift defenses on the south bank, but about 1 a. m. they hit us with tanks. Everything got pretty chaotic. At 3 a. m. we were completely disorganized and falling back.

"Just about dawn we came upon a line of vehicles belonging to a battalion defending the airstrip. For a moment we felt safer, but only for a moment. Then, two enemy tanks came barrelling down the road, spraying right and left with machine guns.

"They Didn't Waste Much Time"

"One of our men was killed and we had some wounded. I don't know how many men on the vehicles were hit but I know some were sleeping when the tanks hit.

"They didn't waste much time on the column but went into the middle of Taejon."

Within Taejon there was furious house-to-house fighting around the concrete schoolhouse, which until a week ago had been the headquarters of American forces in Korea.

In the plan of defense, the Americans had overlooked the ease with which this sprawling city cold be infiltrated by small enemy groups. Once the Communist groups had themselves entrenched in buildings along the main supply routes through Taejon, American forces were effectively cut off from ammunition supplies.

Perhaps there were only a few score enemy trops but they were copiously supplied with automatic small arms, and it would have taken a battalion to route them. Since no reinforcement was immediately available, it appeared that the defending force had no alternative but to fight their way out.

Typical Korean City

From a hilltop overlooking the city this correspondent witnessed the losing fight to reopen a supply route to Americans still holding out on the airfield.

A considerable part of the city was burning. This was a typical Korean city, mainly wooden huts with only a few blocks of concrete buildings, and it burned quicky and furiously with little smoke. Occasionally there was a great puff of flame as the flares reached a petrol dump.

The streets were deserted but groups of Koreans in civilian clothes could be seen running across the rice paddies surrounding the town.

Machine guns chattered and there was an occasional loud crump of mortar falling in the town. But most of the artillery fire was concentrated in the airstrip sector. Shortly after noon American jet planes glided down the brilliant sky and launched rockets at enemy troops on the northern edge of the town. From our position there was no communication with the American units defending the city and the battle picture was completely confused.

Straggler Line Lacking

The Americans had failed to put up a straggler line south of Taejon with the result that a number of soldiers who fled the city were permitted to wander aimlessly to the rear. Many of them still carried rifles and should have been promptly reorganized and sent back to assist in the defense, or at least help secure and open the line for retreat.

Back in the hills an American reserve unit waited vainly for an appeal for assistance from the battered defense units. Up to midafternoon no appeal had reached this unit, although the defenders of Taejon were still in communication with Twenty-fourth Division headquarters.

There was some consolation in reports that the Americans had knocked out eight Red tanks in the battle for Taejon. At least two of these fell victims to the now powerful 3.5 bazooka, which is capable of piercing 8-inch armor.

Corpl. Donald Black of Trenton, N. J., and Pvt. Okey Adkinson of Spencer, W. Va., made up one of the bazooka teams to bag a tank.

Three M. P.'s Slain

First indication that the defending units were cut off came early today when three military policemen were ambushed and apparently slain by infiltrating Red infantry. The M. P.'s riding a jeep were guiding a truck driven by Pvt. Thomas Yarbrought of Oplin, Tex., into town when they blundered into submachinegun nests. Private Yarbrought swerved his truck against a building and escaped through back alleys.

Later Capt. Maurice Slay of West Palm Beach Fla. tried to take a convoy of food trucks through the city.

"They fired at us from the buildings" said Captain Slay "and we were trapped on a street too narrow for trucks to turn around. We had to abandon three trucks filled with food.

"One of our men was killed and another injured. We managed to get both out under covering fire."

Snipers Aim at Newsmen

Around noon a jeepload of South Korean military police emerged from Taejon with a report that the city was quiet. Immediately several correspondents took off for the town. Apparently the Koreans had used a different route. The correspondents were barely inside the main part of Taejon when snipers shot at them from buildings. Their guide, Private Reuben Kimball, of Baytown, Texas, shot a Red infantryman just as he was about to draw a bead on a British correspondent.

During a comparative lull observers heard the incongruous sound of a locomotive whistle from the direction of the station. Soon a train of coaches converted into ambulances came bustling around the bend and into the safety of American lines.

Thailand Troops Offered to Help In Korea Conflict

Lake Success, N. Y., July 20 (U.P.). Trygve Lie's appeal to 50 members of the United Nations for more ground troops to help United States and South Korean forces against Red Korean invaders has failed to muster a single infantryman since it was sent out a week ago.

Nearest approach to non-American commitment of ground troops came in offers—as yet not officially received here—from Thailand and Nicaragua. Thailand's Premier Phibun Songgram, said in an interview that his country would send troops to Koreau, but that the details had to be investigated by the defense ministry.

President, Advisers Discuss Arms Plans

President Truman conferred with advisers on the Nation's new arms-expansion program yesterday, as Republicans in Congress prepared to challenge some of the broad powers he has requested.

The White House conference dealt with the home-front aspects of the Administration's program and was a prelude to consideration by Congress of Mr. Truman's recommendations. These called for power to establish priorities and allocate materials to the armed forces, to control installment buying, and to speed up defense production.

W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board, told reporters at the White House that the would testify early next week before the Senate and House Banking Committees. These committees will handle the legislation giving the President the powers he requested.

Besides Symington, those who conferred with Mr. Truman were Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, Secretary of Commerce Sawyer, Secretary of the Interior Chapman, and Secretary of Labor Tobin.

Telegrams pouring into the White House after Mr. Truman asked Congress for 10 billion dollars for arms, economic controls and higher taxes were "overwhelmingly in support" of his recommendations.

On Capitol Hill, however, there were signs that some of the President's recommendations might encounter trouble. Senator Taft (R., Ohio), said that the broad controls requested went "far beyond any necessity we know of at the moment."

Taft said that the Administration program would "give the President every power he had during the war, except price control and rationing, and would add some new powers."

Representative Wolcott (R., Mich.), ranking minority member of the House Banking Committee, said that if Congress grants the President allocation powers, prices of consumer goods will shoot up "and in 30 days the President will be back here asking for price and wage controls."

Senator Wherry of Nebraska, the Republican floor leader, said he suspected the program was an effort to "nationalize the economy."

Senator Maybank (D., S. C.), chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, indicated that he himself might be disturbed. He said:

"As an individual Senator, it will not be my purpose to approve of any broad and unrestricted authority which might return our people to any system of rationing and price controls until such a move is absolutely necessary beyond any shadow of a doubt."

Some House members, notably Representatives Jones (D., Ala.), and Smathers (D., Fla.), argued that Mr. Truman did not go far enough.

Jones introduced a resolution calling for total mobilization of all citizens, industry and resources in the event of all-out war.

Representative Shafer (R., Mich.), demanded that all Communists in this country be rounded up and put "behind a high fence in concentration camps."

Representative Nixon (R., Calif.) urged that workers in defense industries revive the "no strike" pledge adopted in Word War II.

. . . nominated by President

President Truman yesterday nominated Robert J. Smith, Texas airline executive, as vice chairman of the National Security Resources Board, the agency that coordinates the Nations war mobilization activities.

The appointment must be approved by the Senate.

Smith, a business administrator with a reputation for getting things done in a hurry, is the personal choice of NSRB Chairman W. Stuart Symington.

The two became friends during the recent period when Symington was Secretary of the Air Force and Smith was active in the Air Force Reserve. Smith will be Symington's right-hand man and will act for him in his absence.

The 51-year-old nominee now is head of Pioneer Airlines. He served four years with the Air Force during the war, attaining the rank of colonel. Before the war he was an executive with Braniff Airways and with American Airlines.

Smith is a native of Knoxville, Tenn. He served as a student in officers' training school in World War I. Later he attended North-West University and Jefferson University, earning both a bachelor's and law degree in 1929. The following year he married Miss Jean Whittle, of Dallas. They have two children.

Meanwhile, all leaves were canceled and transfers from active to inactive reserve were halted. The battalion was to continue recruiting for the time being.

The local Marine reserve air unit, the 321st Fighter Squadron (VMF-321) was not affected at this time by the active duty order.

While the armed services went speedily ahead with the business of strengthening their forces in Korea and replacing units sent to the front, the Senate Armed Services Committee struck a snag in its determination to help solve the manpower problem. The committee met yesterday to take quick action on two measures:

1. To remove present ceilings on military manpower.

2. To give the President authority to freeze enlisted personnel in all services for 12 months beyond the term of their enlistments.

Neither proposal was acted upon by the committee, which spent its time debating and finally approving House-passed legislation authorizing "sensitive" Government departments to fire employes of suspected loyalty.

At the Defense Department briefing yesterday afternoon, a long communique from Gen. Douglas MacArthur praising the 3.5 inch bazooka was read to reporters. The rocket-firing weapon, developed near the close of World War II, was said by MacArthur to have been 100 percent successful in stopping heavily armored Red tanks before Taejon.

Next 6 Weeks to Determine Price Control Requirements

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The events of the next six weeks will determine whether the United States will experience such an inflation that price controls must be used, many Washington economists believe.

They think the critical period will be between now and the date that President Truman's proposed economic control program can take effect.

If prices continue to charge upward in continuation of the trend of the last three weeks before the proposed remedial measures of allocations, limitations and credit restrictions can take hold, then there may be no alternative to asking for a price freeze, it is asserted.

Administration economists are divided on their forecasts. Some believe inflation cannot be prevented, and that price controls are inevitable. Others think the price rises will not be too serious, that "the line can be held," and that after a few months prices will stabilize not too far above present levels.

The President, it appears, has followed the line of the second group, as is demonstrated by the mere fact that he did not call for price controls and rationing in his Wednesday message to Congress.

The first group, the gloomy ones, analyze the situation in this fashion:

"Scare buying"—buying in anticipation of future shortages or future price rises, or both—is now under way by both business men and consumers.

In a two-week period the index of wholesale prices has risen by 3 percent, or as much as in the total preceding six months. Retail prices can be expected soon to mirror, or more, probably, magnify, this increase.

The joint Congressional Economic Committee pointed out yesterday that since March 14:

"Food prices for the housewife, as well as raw material prices for the industrial manager, had both risen 15 percent by July 11, and the increase is becoming more rapid. Prices of materials which will go into the military preparedness program are rising more rapidly; steel scrap on July 11 had risen 44 percent, zinc 47 percent, copper 22 percent."

In the last few days, textiles have started an upward price march.

In the light of this trend, some economists contend, and in the face of the prospect of "snowballing" of scarce buying, a serious inflation will have taken place before any anti-inflationary measures can begin to take hold.

Even assuming very prompt congressional approval of Mr. Truman's program, its prce restraining impact is many months away. Curtailment of consumer and housing credit, for instance, will have no effect on the inflationary pressure of the present high level of installment buying or of the enormous number of housing starts already made.

Furthermore, the main contra-inflationary measure the President recommended—higher taxes—will not be felt before those taxes begin to be collected, which probably cannot be before next spring.

Those economists who take the opposite argument concede that some price rises are in store. But, they argue, the situation is such that after a few months there may even be a sharp price reaction the other way, which might serve as a very salutary lesson to the hoarders.

They point out that most of the price rises of the things individual consumers buy have been in farm and food products. And ample supply of these, plus the remedial action that the Department of Agriculture can take—in disposing of surplus commodities, as it has already begun to do in the case of cotton—will have a healthy and fairly immediate curbing effect. The prospect of inventory control and the threat of confiscation of excessive accumulations can likewise act as a restraint on the business man.

Between these two analyses, you pays your money and you takes your choice.

Truman 'to Arms' Order Hailed In Europe as 'Historic' Move

London, July 20 (AP).—Western Europe hailed President Truman's mobilization call today as a historic move in the fight against aggression.

In many quarters there was astonishment over the sweep of the President's program.

But some fearful West German newspapers said it is not enough.

In Britain and a number of other countries, the firmness of American policy brought a sense of relief from anxieties of the day. It was hailed as heartening evidence of American unity in the face of dangers.

Prime Minister Attlee told Commons the British government "warmly welcomes" the President and "will consider what can be done to match the high purpose and resolve to which Mr. Truman has given expression."

"The knowledge that the immense resources of the United States are now being geared to these tasks," Attlee said, "will give heart and encouragement to free peoples throughout the world, and in particular to the sorely pressed people of South Korea and others who may be menaced by aggression."

"The giant awakens," was the tenor of many ediorials.

"This time the reply to menaces is unmistakable," said the London Times.

There was quite a contrary reaction, of course, on the part of the Communists.

The Red press had not yet turned on the full blast of its scorn, but there were signs that the President's program will be subjected to an intense fire of propaganda.

"Say no to America," exclaimed the London Daily Worker. "Not a penny, not a man for MacArthur's war. Not mobilization for war behind Truman, but mobilization of world opinion for the way of peace opened up by the Nehru-Stalin notes."

But in western Europe such expressions were feeble voices in the general chorus of acclaim. From many sides came suggestions that free nations of Europe must match America in determination and in action.

"President Truman's latest message to Congress is also a message of hope for the world of free men," said the London Daily Mail.

"The policy of patience and good will, pursued faithfully but one-sidedly for five years, is ended. Stung by the pin prick from Korea, the giant is at last awake and alert to the dangers of 1950."

Europe Asked To Boost War Goods Output

By The Associated Press

American officials said yesterday plans are being considered to put more western European factories to work producing weapons and military supplies.

Proposals being discussed would make use of scores of idle ammunition and other war factories and also divert to military production some plants now turning out civilian goods.

These proposals are expected to be taken up with European government representatives in London next week.

Charles M. Spofford, New York lawyer, was sworn in at the State Department yesterday as Secretary Acheson's deputy on the North Atlantic Treaty Council and will leave for London Saturday with an eight-man delegation.

The council, of which Spofford is slated to be chosen chairman, will hold its first session with deputies rather than Foreign Ministers in attendance beginning Tuesday. This was originally arranged as an organization session but it is now learned that the principal business will be to discuss ways and means of greatly increasing and speeding up Atlantic defense arrangements in line with President Truman's message to Congress Wednesday.

One plan under consideration here calls, officials said, for the United States to pay the Europeans dollars for war supplies they would turn out in factories now devoted to civilian goods.

This would compensate the Europeans for dollars they would lose when they cut down on production of such items as autmobiles, tractors and electric appliances—goods now sold on the world markets.

This plan presumably would require special legislation by Congress since it would permit the administration, for example, to pay dollars to a French factory owner for rifles he might produce for Belgium or The Netherlands or any other Atlantic Pact country, including the United States.

Under the foreign arms aid mill passed Wednesday by the House, the United States is permitted to pay only for raw materials and machinery needed by Europeans to spur military production, mostly in factories now idle.

Some American officials have concluded this approach is too slow and that some modern factories in western Europe now turning out civilian goods must be used to augment the flow of arms overseas.

Britain, France, Belgium and other Atlantic Pact nations in the past have balked at diverting these factories to military production for fear it would jeopardize their economic recovery.

American officials said they hoped this attitude has changed as a result of the Communist attack on South Korea.

At the meeting of the North Atlantic Council deputies in London next Tuesday, they are prepared to urge that under present conditions less attention should be paid to continued economic recovery and more to producing arms quickly.

Greater Haste Asked By Defense Ministers

Paris, July 20 (NYHT).—The defense ministers of the five Western Unions nations announced today that the international situation made it imperative for the member governments to speed up "without delay" arms production and manpower training.

This policy was adopted at nearby Fontainebleau, headquarters of the defense planning of Great Britain, France, Belgium, Luxembourg and The Netherlands, the five countries linked by the 50-year Brussels treaty.

U. S. White Paper

War Blame Placed on Soviet Too

The United States in an official White Paper marshaled evidence yesterday that Soviet Russia, along with the North Korean Comunists, was to blame for the Korean crisis.

Denouncing the invasion as a "brutal blow to the peace of the world," a 68-page step-by-step record contained charges that Moscow flouted its postwar agreements and defined the United Nations by creating and backing the North Korea regime.

The State Department published the record with the explanation it had the responsibility for placing "full and accurate information" on the crisis before the American people and the world.

Included were the texts of 101 documents, beginning with Ambassador John J. Muccio's first report from Seoul the night of June 23 that the Norh Koreans had launched an "all-out offensive" against South Korean republicans.

Published also were six reports to Secretary General Trygve Lie from the United Nations Commission on the scene. In contrast to the Communist propaganda claims that the South Koreans started the fighting, the commission advised Lie that the invasion was carefully planned in advance and launched in secrecy against South Korean forces that were organized solely for defense.

The State Department summarized Russia's role in Korea in a narrative that related:

1. Russia at Potsdam and at the time of declaring war against Japan pledged that Korea "in due course" should become free and independent.

2. The thirty-eighth parallel dividing lne between North and South Korea was established only as a temporary expedient to avoid confusion in accepting the surrender of the Japanese. Russia quickly moved in troops and "arbitrarily" made the line a permanent division.

3. After agreeing at the Moscow conference in late 1945 to help set up a provisional democratic government for all Korea, Russia blocked all efforts to this end.

4. When the United States in trying to end the stalemate referred the dispute to the United Nations, Russia adopted a "negative attitude" and barred from North Korea a U. N. commission that was named to supervise elections. While the United States and 31 other nations extended recognition to the South Korea republic, Russia vetoed its entry republic of the U. N.

5. Meantime, the Soviet Union established the North Korea Communist regime, which "has lived, as it was created, in complete defiance of the U. N.

Detailing the events of the actual Korean crisis, the White Paper stressed that the United States from the beginning has been acting through and in behalf of the United Nations.

Reynaud Says European Peril Is Worse Now Than in 1939

London, July 20 (U.P.).—Former French remier Paul Reynaud said today "the situation in Europe today is worse than in 1939."

Reynaud, who arrived here by air for a meeting of the united Europe movement, warned that "an aggressor" could drive westward across Europe to the English Channel without hinderance.

He said only fear of the atomic bomb acted as a deterrent against such aggression.

"We shall have to be very careful," he said.

Reds Set British Oil Tanks Afire in Burma

Rangoon, Burma, July 20 (AP).—Communists set fire to six British-owned oil tanks with tracer bullets, destroying 150,000 gallons of crude oil at the Burmah Oil Co.'s field at Chauk, 390 miles from here, an official announcement said today.

U. S. Arms Will Help French in Indo-China

Saigon, French Indo-China, July 20 (U.P.). — United States Marine Gen. Erskine Graves, ranking officer of an American fact-finding mission in the Far East, said today the French army in Indo-China was the most powerful force fighting communism in southeast Asia.

He said the United States would supply arms and equipment to make the French forces even stronger.

Veer Off Formosa, Britain Tells Fleet

London, July 20 (AP).—Britain has ordered her Far Eastern fleet to remain neutral if Chinese Reds attack Formosa.

An informant with official status said Adm. Sir Patrick Brind, Britain's Far Eastern commander, has been ordered to keep British ships out of any conflict that might flare up if Chinese Reds get involved with the American Seventh Fleet guarding Formosa.

The British have extended recognition to Communist China; the United States has not.

Nationalist Puts Query On Truman's Meaning

Taipei, Formosa, July 20 (AP).—A Chinese Nationalist offcial today asked "What does President Truman mean?" by his policy statement to Congress.

Truman said yesterday:

"The present military neutralization of Formosa is without prejudice to political questions affecting the island."

Official comment was refused, but a spokesman said:

"Formosa is part of the republic of (Nationalist) China.

"The Chinese Reds are a puppet government who have achieved their present position on the mainland through the aid and direction given them by Moscow."

Bishop Byrne 'Unreported' In Red Korea

Bishop Byrne

Bishop Byrne remained behind in Seoul when it fell to the North Korean forces. As a young priest, he opened the original mission territory for the Maryknoll Fathers in North Korea. With him is Father William R. Booth of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Bishop Byrne was superior of the Maryknoll Fathers in the Kyoto prefecture, Japan, when he was appointed to his present Korean post.

Born in Washington in 1888, he attended St. Charles College in Ellicott City, Md. He was ordained at St. Mary's Seminary in Baltimore in 1915 and joined the Maryknoll Fathers a week later.

Daily Bonus For Fighting Forces Asked

Infantrymen in combat in Korea would get a $5 a day bonus under a bill introduced by Representative Potter (R., Mich.).

Potter, who lost two legs fighting as a ground soldier in World War II, told the House yesterday "there has been lots of talk of push-button warfare."

"But now that we're fighting agani, we find that the doughboy is the unsung hero who still must do the dirty job," he said.

16 Killed by Exploding Munitions on Formosa

Taipei, Formosa, July 20 (AP).—The death toll from an exploding Chinese Nationalist army munitions truck today rose to 16.

Three persons were killed instantly when the truck collided yesterday with another vehicle. Thirteen died in a hospital, which said at least four more victims were expected to die.

Parents at Television See Son on Stretcher

Cushing, Okla., July 20 (U.P.)—The Korean war has been brought right into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Jones of Cushing.

Watching pictures from Korea on the family television set, Jones suddenly grabbed his wife's arm.

"Isn't that Lowell?" he asked, pointing to a soldier sitting on a stretcher.

Mrs. Jones moved closer to the screen, fearfully.

"Before I could answer," she said later, "the boy on the stretcher was moved right up to the front of the screen. There was no mistake; it was our son Lowell."

U. S. Chamber Head Fears Loss of Korea

Spring Lake, Mich., July 20 (AP). Otto A. Seyferth, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, says American troops "are in danger of losing Korea."

Seyferth spoke at a banquet in his honor here last night a few hours after he flew in from Washington.

He denied published reports that he had predicted flatly that United States forces will be "driven out of Korea."

He said this could happen unless all groups support the Korean effort. He urged businessmen to aid along this line by holding down their inventories of materials that might be needed by the armed forces.

Bay State War Bonus For Korea Duty Asked

Boston, July 20 (AP).—A movement was started in the Massachusetts Legislature today to pay a bonus to Bay State members of the armed forces fighting in Korea.

Two Democratic representatives from Boston—Francis X. Joyce and Ralph W. Sullivan—proposed bonuses of up to $300 under the same provision as those given World War II veterans.

Cominform Leaders Hear U. S. Assailed at Berlin Rally

Berlin, July 20 (AP).—With the big bosses of the Cominform standing by, East German Communists today denounced United States intervention in Korea and pledged to fight alongside Russia in any new world war.

Overhead, there was an unexplained display of Soviet aviation. A flight of about 60 Russian fighters roared over the American sector at 3000 feet. The incident may have been only a training maneuver, but formation flying over Berlin is contrary to four-power agreements.

While the little Germans talked big at their most flamboyant Communist Party convention, the eyes of most western observers were fixed on their "honored foreign guests"—the Cominform delegates—who stayed silently in the background.

A German spokesman said the Cominform chieftains "will certainly use this opportunity to discuss all pending political questions arising from the present situation." This suggested the first full-scale parley of the Cominform—the Moscow-ruled Communist Information Bureau—since that held last December "somewhere in Hungary."

The spokesman was George Stibi, deputy to East Germany propaganda chief, Gerhart Eisler. He refused to specify the questions that would be discussed. Early speeches in the convention had highlighted the Korean war and Titoism, the independent brand of communism sponsored by Yugoslav Premier Marshal Tito.

The visiting foreign Communists were headed by M. A. Suslov, secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and the Kremlin's Cominform ringmaster.

Other Cominform stalwarts include leading Politburo members from China and all the Soviet satellite states, as well as Italy's Palmiro Togliatti and France's Jacques Duclos.

Vishinsky Rumored There

East German officials confirmed that all Cominform countries are represented among the "honored guests," but declined to comment on a report that Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky had interrupted a vacation in Czechoslovakia to be here.

The meeting—the third annual convention of East Germany's Socialist Unity (Communist) Party—is the largest gathering of Red leaders since the outbreak of the Korean war. It comes as Communist presure is being increased against Yugoslavia, which was expelled from the Cominform in 1948.

The Cominform leaders will make their only public speeches Monday in a Soviet-type climax to the party convention. Communists will be rounded up for a mass demonstration in the Lustgarten square to hear the foreign guests speak.

Many Believed Using Test to Dodge Draft

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

There's more than a faint suspicion among Selective Service officials that selectees are deliberately flunking the Army's pre-induction mental test in order to avoid military service, it was learned yesterday.

The Army says it's not worried. "It's extremely improbable that a man could avoid induction by purposely making a low mark in the qualification test," an Army spokesman said. He added, however, that the Army was not publicizing its methods of detecting malingerers.

Col. Asher W. Harman, Virginia's draft director, yesterday attributed a "large portion" of the high rate of rejection of selectees under the present Selective Service Act, passed in 1948, to deliberate deception.

He pointed out that during the draft call of November-December, 1948, and January, 1949, the rejection rate among Virginia selectees was 71 percent, or just about double the percentage of turndowns in the World War II draft. He fears that the current high rejection rate reported from pre-induction centers is again attributable to intentional flunking of mental tests.

Of the 71 percent rejected, 46 percent were turned back for mental reasons, chiefly for failure to pass the Army's pre-induction test, Colonel Harman said.

The Virginia Selective Service chief said he believed the substantially lower rejection rate of World War II was largely due to the fact that the Army gave mental tests after induction. Then the draftees had an incentive to score high marks in order to win better classification and perhaps a chance to go to officers' training class.

As permitted under the postwar Selective Service Act, Colonel Harman said, the Army has been giving its mental exam prior to induction. This method, he suspects permits a number selectees to avoid induction by flunking the test.

Col. Joel D. Griffing, head of the Selective Service System's manpower division, commented yesterday that draft headquarters was aware of the suspicions concerning the rejection rate, but considered the problem was an Army matter.

Griffing said he did not believe the flunking ruse was as frequently attempted as some officials suspected. He added, however, there's no doubt but that the pre-induction mental test "has played havoc with the acceptance rate."

An Army spokesman, in deprecating the draft officials' suspicions, explained that the preinduction mental examination presently being given to draftees is a "qualification test," which measures a the spokesman said, is not a measman's capacity to learn. The test, ure of formal education, beyond the fact that the test presupposes an elementary knowledge of English and arithmetic, such as learned in grade school.

Failure to pass the preinduction test does not by itself keep a selectee from induction, the Army spakesman stressed. The Army takes into account, he said, the draftee's education and employment background.

When the history of the draftee shows that he's had "a certain minium of schooling or an ability to earn a living in a great many lines of work," which by themselves would indicate that the selectee should have passed the qualification test, the Army can induct him despite his flunking the test.

During World War II draftees were generally not given preinduction mental exams. After induction they were given the Army General Classification Test.

During the draft of late 1948-early 1949, the selectees were given a similar classification test. The reason for this change in procedure, the Army spokesman said, was to permit finer screening of draftees. In peacetime, the Army spokesman said, a higher grade inductee is needed for the Army in order to have a cadre available as teachers in the event of sudden wartime expansion of the armed forces.

Since January 1, 1950, the Army has discontinued the classification test in its pre-induction exams, and substituted the Armed Forces Qualification Test. Passing score on this test for the Army is 70. On the basis of the Army's experience in testing 11 million men in World War II, it's estimated that 12 percent of the national population would fail to attain the passing mark of 70 on the qualification test.

It's the Army's belief, according to the spokesman, that the current crop of draftees, ranging in age from 18 through 25, would contain less than 12 percent unable to pass the qualification test.

At the Washington area preinduction center, located in the Army-Air Force Main Recruiting Station at Arlington Farms, Va., eight out of nine of the first group of draftees fro mthis region flunked the qualification test. The group, from La Plata, Md., consisted of laborers and farm hands, with little or no education.

Yesterday, however, 17 out of 21 draftees, sent in by the Hyattsville (Md.) board, cleared the preliminary physical and mental exams. Only two were rejected for failing to get a passing score on the qualification test.

In Baltimore, Col. Henry C. Stanwood, State Selective Service director, said that returns from preinduction stations around the State of Maryland indicated an "excessively high rate" of rejections among the current groups of draftees. He estimated the rejection rate at 70 percent, as against 30 to 40 percent during World War II.

Stanwood blamed the high rejection rate to the fact that the present groups of draftees were in the 24 and 25-year age brackets, which included a large proportion of men who had been deferred for physical or mental reasons during the World War II draft.

Navy Swears In Ten; Reserve Officers Ask In

Ten men were sworn in here as sailors yesterday and another, a member of the Navy Reserve, was assigned to active duty.

Navy recruiting officers reported 12 reserve officiers had applied for active duty and that 11 men, four of whom were unable to meet requirements, had applied for enlistment.

Army and Air Force recruiting officers said that 55 men had been given mental tests, with 46 passing, and 15 men had been sworn in by the Army and 4 by the Air Force.

Hershey Asks New 'Killers' For Services

Columbus, Ohio, July 20 (U.P.)—Selective Service Chief Lewis B. Hershey today called for a new armed forces in their struggle to drive North Korean Communist troops back behind the thirty-eighth parallel.

Since the 14 million men under arms in World War II were "used up and burned out," he said, men who have just come of draft age are needed now.

"In the last war we had seven million killers and another seven million to back them up. But the killers are old now, 32 or 33," Hershey added. "Many of them are used up, burned out, in spite of brilliant war records."

The man who mobilized the vast armed forces that forced Japan and Germany to surrender said his organization had done nothiong but keep records for the past two years.

"We have nearly 1,500,000 men who have been classified 1-A, and have not been examined," Hershey said. "They are the men who just came of draft age in the past two years, who could have begun training."

The major general said the United States should have no "illusions about how long this is going to last."

"We're face to face with a decision that we would have had to make sooner or later, and the longer we let things slide, the worse they probably would have become," he added.

"We're a rich and great country," Hershey said. "We've done it twice before and if we have to we'll do it again—make no mistake about that."

Gillette Vows Quick Action on Food Prices

Gillette responded. Charles Holman, president of the National Milk Producers Association, interrupted at this point to shout: "The only great food producers that have not shown any price rise are dairymen."

Before Gillette's announcement, his committee had heard Senator Edward J. Thye (R., Minn.), warn milk producers in the Washington milkshed they were "inviting trouble" by blocking importation of milk from outside the local milkshed.

"If producers in the Eastern Seaboard big city centers become too anxious to protect themselves by setting up regulations to keep milk from outside, they will find themselves in trouble.

"Eventually, they are going to have a milk war on their hands. In a milk war the producer is eventually the loser."

They in an impassioned speech directed partly to the committee and partly to Holman and other producers present, called on all producers:

1. To stop fighting among themselves.

2. To increase consumption. He urged advertising and publicity to make more people drink milk.

"Milk is just as tasty if you're thirsty as Coca-Cola," he shouted. "But how are you going to work together for publicity, when the producer in a Western area can't get into a restricted area in the East?"

Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.) told about a machine set up in New York to dispense milk the way Coca-Cola machines do. But city health authorities are threatening to ban them unless the milk is put out in bottles.

"I don't know why the milk is more subject to being contaminated than Coca-Cola," he commented.

They also lambasted milk producers in the Washington milkshed as being "old fashioned" compared with dairymen in his State. He contrasted all-electric dairy farms in Minnesota, where a constant supply of hot water is available with "farms around here operating under the 25-year-old milk law."

He sneered at claims that local milk is the best.

"The Grade A milk produced in Minnesota," he said, "is just as fit for human consumption as Grade A produced in Washington or any place else in the world.

"The day will come," he declared, "when uniform inspection laws, with cooperation between Federal and State authorities, will be in force throughout the entire country. It will come. It should come. These local producers will be in trouble ultimately, if they continue to set prices way out of line."

Other developments on the price front include:

1. Six House members offered a bipartisan resolution to create a special 15-man House committee to watch the cost of living and "unscrupulous" groups that may take advantage of the national emergency.

2. Department store sales have zoomed under scare buying. Sales last week were 24 percent above a year ago. The Washington area was lowest, with only a 12 percent increase. Dallas, Tex., with an increase of 39 percent, was tops.

3. W. F. Williamson, vice president of the National Coffee Association, issued a statement that there is plenty of coffee and that price increases were due to "unfriendly statements from the Gillette Committee." But in spite of Williamson, green coffee went up again yesterday half a cent a pound.

4. Commodities generally were quiet on the exchanges, although all were up slightly. Cotton advanced 35 cents to $1.85 a bale. Wool futures were 2 cents a pound higher, and wool tops 1½ to 3½ cents higher.

5. Cocoa, lead, zinc, old hides, cottonseed oil, wheat, rye and lard went up.

6. The stock market was stronger for the third day in a row. War-baby stocks were leaders, with railroad issues stronger. Buying evidently was based on the rearmament proposals of President Truman.

7. Shell Oil raised gas prices up as much as half a cent a gallon.

8. Prices of light metals, aluminum and magnesium—used in aircraft manufacture—went up. Both Reynolds Metals and Alumihum Corporation announced boosts.

Huge Box-Car Plan Backed By Prudential

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Prudential Insurance Co. will finance up to 80 per cent of a proposed billion-dollar program of new rail freight car construction.

Shanks

Carroll M. Shanks, Prudential president announced details at a press conference yesterday in the Mayflower Hotel, held in connection with the exhibition of a new-type "damage free" freight car at the Union Station here.

The program, Shanks said, involves the building and placing into service of 100,000 such cars. The cars will be built by General American-Evans, a subsidiary of Chicago's General American Transportation Corp. Production is expected to reach 20-cars-a-day rate by September.

Eight large railroads already have entered into leasing arrangements for the de luxe cars. The new rolling stock is described as having undercarriage structure and shock-absorbent equipment similar to that used in passenger car equipment.

Shanks added that if orders are received for as many as 100,000 of the new cars, Prudential is prepared to invest some 800 million dollars in their construction, with General American-Evans providing the remaining 200 million dollars.

The leasing plan is somewhat similar to the box car building program announced several months ago by the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

Attending were 70 association executives who will attempt to establish liaison relationships with the Government so that the retail industry "may effectively play a constructive part in national planning for whatever emergency may arise."

Leopold Call Voted; 189 Quit Assembly

Lost Prospector Found in Desert

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
FRANK RUSSELL, 19, of Sylvania, Ohio, a gold prospector, rests in a hospital after being lost in southern California's Mojave Desert for seven days. He was found wondering barefoot in temperatures up to 116. Russell said he kept himself alive by sucking the juice and eating the hearts of cactus plants

Brussels, Belgium, July 20 (U.P.). The Catholic majority in Parliament called exiled King Leopold III back to the throne today after all other parties walked out in grim silence that portended new crises.

Leopold, who has not reigned since he surrendered Belgium's armies to the Germans ten years ago, was expected to return Saturday from Switzerland, where he has spent the recent years of his exile. Special planes stood by for his use.

Socialists, Communists and all but one Liberal rose in silence and stalked out of the special joint session of Parliament just before the showdown vote was taken on the Catholic government's proposal to repeal the 1945 law declaring Leopold unfit to reign.

189 Refuse to Vote

The vote was 198 for the King's return and none against. But 189 members of Parliament refused to vote. The one Liberal in the chamber voted with the 197 Christian Socialists (Catholics) who were assured of victory with their majority of 11.

The vote ended the regency of Leopold's brother, Prince Charles, and left the country temporarily without a chief of state.

Socialist Leader Paul-Henri Spaak took a parting shot at the Catholics just before leaving the assembly:

"After vainly appealing and pleading with you, we are going to leave this assembly before the vote is taken.

"You will stay alone to take one of the gravest and most disastrous decisions in history. The King will be called back by one party in an atmosphere of opposition and discord.

"You alone will assume this terrible responsibility. We will take our own tribute to the regent who is a really constitutional chief of state."

The Socialists have expressed undying hostility to Leopold and threatened to call general strikes and to use all available means to express that hostility.

Leopold's actual return to Belgian soil was certain to touch off a further wave of strikes and demonstrations that have tormented Belgium since a referendum on the King's return gave him a narrow margin of victory.

The Catholic president of the joint session, Frans van Cauwelaert, announced that he, as president of the House, and Paul Struye, president of the Senate, would go to Geneva to tell Leopold of Parliament's decision to call him home.

Unity Form Is Approved In Indonesia

Jakarta, United States of Indonesia, July 20 (AP).—The form of a new and strongly centralized government to unify Indonesia was approved today by the United States of Indonesia and the islands' largest state, the Republic of Indonesia.

Unification of the islands will be accomplished August 17, when the new government formally is set up. August 17 is the fifth anniversary of a proclamation of independence by the Republic of Indonesia. The Dutch granted the Indonesians freedom last December.

The over-all government will replace the dual governments of Jakarta and Jogjakarta. Its seat will be Jakarta. President Soekarna will remain the chief of state.

The unification climaxes a long campaign to bring under one government the 16 original states, which developed from Dutch military action and influence.

The cabinets agreed that Indonesia should be divided into 10 provinces. Three provincial areas will be set up in Java, three in Sumatra, one in Borneo and three among the islands of East Indonesia.

All of the Dutch-sponsored units have joined the republic except the States of East Indonesia and East Sumatra and the autonomous area of West Borneo.

The new Parliament will have the present U.S.I. House of Representatives of 149 members, the U.S.I. Senate of 32 members.

Wholesale Gas Price Increased In District Area

All major oil companies in the Washington area yesterday increased the wholesale price of gasalone 4/10 of a cent per gallon.

The action followed the lead of Esso-Standard, which had increased its price 2/10 to 5/10 of a cent per gallon Tuesday.

The price increase is expected to be felt immediately by motorists, although the retail increase is up to the individual seller, according to R. A. Herrick, executive director of the Retail Gasoline Dealers Association.

Auto Injures Small Boys Looking for Trouble

Detroit, July 20 (U.P.).—Two small boys today tied a rope around their waists and stretched it across the highway "to see what would happen" when a car passed.

An auto hit the rope and the boys were smashed against its sides, Terry Drake, 6, and his playmate, Walter Pardington, 7, suffered fractured skulls and other injuries.

Tydings Challenges Senate to Act on 'Vile' McCarthy Charges

afternoon after a vain, but solid, attempt by the Republicans to force the recommittal to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee of its subcommittee's scathing 300-page majority report on the charges.

In three votes, all on parliamentary questions but in effect all dealing with the same issue—to have the Senate refuse to accept the report and send it back to the Committee—Republicans lost to a Democratic majority.

The votes, usually of about 46 to 37, and all on points of order, were on strict party lines, without a single Democrat or Republican straying from the fold.

Such comfort as the GOP Senators could take from them lay in the fact they had succeeded in corralling every member to "go down the line" in objecting to the majority report and, by inference, supporting McCarthy.

Even such Republican Senators as Mrs. Smith (Me.), Aiken (Vt.) and Morse (Oreg.), on the liberal wing and in the past most critical of McCarthy's methods, voted with their party.

Although Tydings, with sarcasm and burlesque, often had the Senate in roars of laughter, nevertheless for the most part of the day the scene was one of tense, cold anger.

Once it got hot enough for fists to swing—or almost.

One of the would-be pugilists was Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.), the minority leader, who took offense at one of the passages in the Tydings report.

During a lull in Senate proceedings, he asked the subcommittee counsel, Edward P. Morgan, a37-year-old 6-footer, if he had written the report. The two men argued, moving toward the Senate door. Morgan said he helped prepare and write the document.

At the door, Wherry is reported to have hurled an unprintable epithet at Morgan. While Senator Connally (D., Tex.), who was nearby, cautioned Wherry not to do such things on the Senate floor, Wherry pulled back his fist and apparently placed one punch.

Morgan told reporters later that Wherry "lost his wits and resorted to his fists."

The passage in the majority report that offended Wherry was a line from the testimony to the subcommittee of Emanual S. Larsen, a figure in the Amerasia case, describing an interview he had with Wherry shortly after McCarthy first made his charges last spring.

According to Larsen, Wherry said: "Oh, Mac (McCarthy) has gone out on a limb and kind of made a fool of himself and we (i.e. the Republicans) have to back him up now.

Wherry categorically denied to the Senate that he had ever made such a remark or anything like it.

[Long before Larsen testified to this effect to the Tydings subcommittee, he recounted to a reporter his version of his visit to Wherry. He said that the Senator, in commenting on McCarthy's charges, said McCarthy got himself on "a helluva spot," because he could not build up a case against the man he first had thought of as the "Number One spy in America," and accordingly had to shift to Owen Lattimore to fill that billing. Editor's note.]

Before Tydings made his speech, his majority report came in for angry criticism by Republicans. Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), a member of the subcommittee, claimed it had not called all the witnesses it should have, and said that virtually no effort had been made to study disloyalty in the State Department.

Senator Lodge (R., Mass.), the other member of the subcommittee, insisted the report would not make a "clean" end to the questions raised by McCarthy, and appealed for a plan he has previously offered. It calls for a bipartisan commission to investigate and report on the question of disloyalty in the State Department.

Armed with piles of paper, a small phonograph and records, charts and an easel, Tydings took the floor to talk about the report he had filed a couple of hours earlier.

Again and again he made not too veiled comments about McCarthy.

"Anything I say on the Senate floor," he sneered, "I'll say outside the Senate floor and I won't retract it when I'm out."

He spoke of "men of little character who would prefer to serve their own ends rather than their country."

He began by insisting that what a Senator of the United States says is bound to carry the most serious weight.

That is why, he indicated, McCarthy's remarks of February, 9 this year, in Wheeling, W. Va., that there was a spy ring in the State Department, that there were 205 card-carrying members in the department, and that Secretary of State Acheson knew about them but was doing nothing to get rid of them made such a tremendous impression.

In elaborate demonstration, he sought to show that McCarthy had actually said that, but had lied to the Senate later in denying he said it.

Tydings pointed to a record of a McCarthy speech. "There is the voice," he said, "and it is not the voice of truth."

There is not much doubt, he went on, what McCarthy said, and that he later denied saying it.

"That's why I said that a hoax and a fraud was perpetrated on the United States," Tydings roared, "any, by the eternal God, that's true."

At the end of the day, McCarthy issued a short statement saying Tydings had "tried to notify Communists in Government that they are safe in their positions."

However, he said, as a result of his charges, two of the people mentioned in his famous "81 cases" have already left the Government. One was not named, but the other, said McCarthy, was his Case 19, which he said was William W. Remington.

[The 81 cases purported to be those of present or former State Department employes. As McCarthy presented Case No. 19 to the Senate, it was so vague as to be unidentifiable. Remington has never been a State Department employe. Editor's note.]

McCarthy 'Golden Voice' To Be Heard in Private

By the United Press

Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) is going to stage a private performance starring the "golden voice" of Senator Joseph R. McCarthy of Wisconsin.

And though advance billing promises a show to remember, you can bet Republican Whip Kenneth S. Wherry won't be in the audience. Tydings was like a frustrated impressario when Wherry started to object to playing the McCarthy recording on the Senate floor.

The Maryland Democrat wanted to give the flavor of reality to his charges that McCarthy prepetrated a "fraud and hoax" on the Senate and the American public.

All the apparatus was in place. Tydings was about to let the Senators hear the Wisconsin Republican's own voice charging there were 205 card-carrying Communists in the State Department.

McCarthy had made the claim in a broadcast over station WWVA, Wheeling, W. Va., last February.

Wherry started to protest that "there are certain rules governing use of the Senate chamber," but Tydings cut him short, snapping:

"I will play this record off the Senate floor at a later time, but admission will be by card only."

The Maryland Democrat proceeded to tell "what the record would say if I could play it," adding with heavy sarcasm:

"My hearers will never get the full beauty they could through hearing the golden voice itself telling it. (Laughter filled the packed chamber.)

But the crowded Senate and jammed galleries could not have been more attentive as Tydings took the center of the stage.

With pointer and charts, he traced what he called McCarthy's "odyssey" from Wheeling, W. Va., where the 205-Communists charge was aired, to Salt Lake City, Utah, where the Wisconsin Red-hunter changed the figure to 57, to the Senate floor where, Tydings said, McCarthy substituted 81 "warmed-over" cases of alleged security risks.

Now shouting, now speaking in a low, intense voice, Tyrings produced a chart that he said he had labeled "Behind the Eight Ball."

It listed eight groups he said had found nothing in the 81 cases—four committes of the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress, former Representative Bartel Jonkman (R., Mich.), Senators Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) and Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (R., Mass.), and "the entire Eightieth Congress."

McCarthy sat silent, his hand to his chin, as Tydings—his voice tinged with sarcasm—said, "Oh, my, how the newspapers did lap up these things."

Tydings went on like an orchestra leader, building up to his climax. He spoke of his subcommittee's action in clearing Owen Lattimore and others of McCarthy's Communist charges, and said sorrowfully:

"After five months of false smears, headlines, the papers won't print much of it. Our hearts are out there in Korea. The poor devils whose names were paraded will be lucky if they are mentioned on page 73 under the weather advertisement."

"What is the Senate going to do about it?" he demanded.

When he sat down, Democrats applauded heartily, then lined up to shake his hand.

Harry Gold Pleads Guilty To A-Spying

Philadelphia, July 20 (U.P.)—Harry Gold, Swiss-born scientist, pleaded guilty in Federal Court today to charges he relayed stolen United States atomic secrets to Russia. He faces a maximum penalty of death, but this is considered unlikely.

The once-plump 39-year-old biochemist, now thin and haggard, delivered his guilty plea in a firm, clear voice at a brief arraignment before Judge James J. McGranery in United States District Court.

Sentencing was postponed until September and there was no indication whether the Government will demand his death.

"I can't tell what I will ask," United States Attorney Gerald A. Gleeson said.

After postponing sentence until Federal probation authorities investigate Gold's background, McGranery asked that the Government recommend a penalty, but then made it clear that "I will not necessarily follow the Governments advice."

The indictment against Gold listed 11 secret missions during which he acted as go-between for British scientist Klaus Fuchs, who is serving 14 years in a London prison for atomic spying. Gold pleaded guilty to the entire indictment.

Gold was brought to the Federal Building nearly five hours before his arraignment. He was held in a detention room where his father visited him and kissed his hands before leaving. The father did not attend the arraignment.

Before Gold entered his plea, Gleeson withdrew a motion he had made to have the case transferred to the Eastern District of New York, where the indictment against the defendant was handed up by a Brooklyn grand jury June 9.

Gold appeared in court just three days after the Federal Bureau of Investigation announced the arrest in New York of Julius Rosenberg, 32, as a confederate of Gold.

The FBI earlier had arrested David Greenglass, a brother of Mrs. Rosenberg's, and Alfred Dean Slack, 44, a Syracuse, N. Y., scientist, as members of the espionage ring.

Rosenberg, an engineer, recruited Greenglass to work with Gold in passing atomic secrets to Fuchs, the FBI charged. Greenglass at the time was employed at the Los Alamos, N. Mex., atomic bomb laboratory.

Slack allegedly gave Gold information on a new explosion for transmission to the Russians. At the time, Slack was employed at the Holston Ordnance Works, Kingsport, Tenn.

Gold, who was engaged in cardiac research at a Philadelphia hospital at the time of his arrest, has been held in prison here under $100,000 bail. He was returned there after the hearing.

He was accompanied to the arraignment by his court-appointed attorney, John D. M. Hamilton, former Republican National Chairman.

A-Plant Labor Peace Policy Worked Out

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Management, labor and government have worked out a cooperative atomic energy industry-labor relations policy that "seems to provide the maximum assurance against strikes" and yet give employers and unions freedom for collective bargaining.

This conclusion is reached by Donald B. Straus in a National Planning Association study, "The Development of a Policy for Industrial Peace in Atomic Energy," made public yesterday.

Management-labor relations, particularly labor's traditional right to strike for economic benefits, must deal with a number of extraordinary problems in the atomic-energy field, Straus points out.

In the first place, there is the question of security. Secondly, there is the public's attitude against work stoppages in such an essential industry. Thirdly, the Government owns the atomic plants, and must bear the costs. Therefore, the Government's agent, the Atomic Energy Commission, cannot sit idly by and permit private employers, who operate the plants for the Government, and the organized employes, who work for the private employers, to decide for themselves questions of wages and working conditions.

On the other hand, our Government has hesitated to abolish the right to strike by law, and, within the limits of national security, has tried to work out strike-preventing procedures through voluntary and cooperative action, according to Straus.

The pamphlet traces the course of labor relations in the atomic energy industry, and discloses that labor's leaders cooperated wholeheartedly during the war, when secrecy was vital, by helping workers into the atomic energy plants and by refraining from trying to organize them into unions.

After the war, however, the clamp on organizing was lifted. Both AFL and CIO undertook intensive organizing campaigns, and demanded free collective bargaining. It quickly developed, however, that those workers on jobs essential to keeping atomic energy production going could not for practical purposes make use of their strike weapon. The public wouldn't stand for it, and, as the Atomic Energy Commission showed, neither would the Government.

As a result of several strike incidents, the President created a special committee to investigate the problem in 1948, and the following year, at the committee's recommendations, established a three-man atomic energy labor relations panel to assist in peaceful settlement of disputes. Straus is executive secretary of the panel.

The panel is supposed to prevent surprise strikes, inasmuch as both management and unions of the Government's atomic energy plants have agreed to call on the panel's procedures first. The panel deliberately operates through indefinite procedures so that the management-union representatives will not be able to figure what to expect.

The reason for this deliberate "fuzziness," Straus said, is that the negotiators will be less eager "to relinquish their own responsibility for working out a solution."

Recommendations of the panel are not binding, and can be rejected by either management, unions, or the Atomic Energy Commission. Even so, as of June 10, the study said, nine cases had been satisfactorily settled by the panel, and two cases were pending.

On the top level, management and labor have given full cooperation to the panel, but the local unions, according to Straus, sometimes show "less enthusiasm" for the idea. To overcome this attitude in the locals, the panel must undertake an educational program, Straus said, in order to assure the long-run success of the program.

Aide Denies He Influenced RFC Loan

By The Associated Press

John J. Hagerty, a Reconstruction Finance Corporation official who once quit the lending agency to work for the Waltham Watch Co., yesterday denied his position with RFC had influenced a loan to the concern.

Hagerty, Boston office manager for RFC just prior to approval of a six-million-dollar loan to Waltham in 1949 and later the $3,000-a-year agent for trustees of the watch concern, testified before a Senate subcommittee investigating the RFC's lending policies.

It was brought out that the RFC loan to Waltham was approved February 18, 1949, and that Hagerty was appointed trustees' agent April 1, 1949.

"Was your acceptance of the appointment conditioned upon disbursal of the loan?" Chairman Fulbright (D., Ark.) asked Hagerty.

"No," Hagerty replied, "the offer of the job was not conditioned on getting the RFC loan. I did tell the trustees, however, that if the loan were not disbursed I'd like to come back to the Government where I had served for 23 years."

Hagerty said that when he accepted the Waltham position no one knew whether the company, which had been closed, could be successively reorganized.

"I took a chance on going in as trustees' agent. I did it as a public service," he said.

The company resumed operations under a court-approved reorganization plan and with funds made available by the RFC. It closed again February 3, 1950, when the RFC took possession to protect the four million dollars advanced on its loan.

Hagerty's services with the company ended then, and he since has been reemployed by the RFC as a special assistant to the board.

Hagerty said "the RFC has consistently taken the position that when a borrower from the RFC requested that an agency employe join it that the RFC would not stand in the way."

Hagerty said he was aware Fulbright held a different view.

"It is not my view alone," Fulbright replied, "it is the view of Congress which passed a bill a year ago against such practice."

"I can agree," Hagerty said, "that if an RFC employe had recommended a loan be made he should not then go into the employment of the borrower.

"In this case, however, I consistently recommended against the loan to the Waltham Co. on a credit basis. However, had I been a member of the RFC board at the time the loan was approved, I would have voted to make the commitment."

Senate-House Conferees Vote to Increase Old-Age Benefits by Almost 100 Percent

By The Associated Press

Sharply higher old-age insurance benefit payments were voted yesterday by a Senate-House Conference Committee that is shaping a bill expanding the Social Security program.

The committee, which is smoothing out differences in bills passed by the two chambers, agreed on a virtual 100 percent increase in the benefits to be received at retirement by persons now working. It voted also to take a 77½ percent average increase on insurance checks now going to aged persons and survivors already getting them.

The conferees already have settled on language extending the program to five million self-employed persons and one million domestic servants. The bill will increase the number of all persons covered by 10 million, making a total of 45 million.

Passage of a bill is expected this session.

For persons who have not yet retired, the increases would work like this for workers in covered employment for five years:

If monthly wage were $50, present $21-a-month benefit at retirement would be boosted to $25; if wage $100 a month, the increase would be from $26 to $50; if wage $150, the benefit increases from $32 to $58; wage $200, benefit jumps from $37 to $65; wage $250, benefit goes from $42 to $72; wage $300 or over, the benefit would be $80 a month.

The payments would be greater for persons insured for longer periods. They are larger also when the insured person has dependents at the time of retirement.

The conferees agreed on terms for bringing about 800,000 regularly employed farm workers under the insurance plan. The coverage would not be extended to migrant workers, principally because of the difficulty of keeping records.

The conferees decided also to blanket into the program about 350,000 persons previously excluded by a "definition of employe" amendment adopted three years ago.

Yesterday's action, not repealing the amendment, stipulates that coverage should be extended to full-time life-insurance salesmen; agent drivers and commission drivers engaged in distribution of meat, vegetable and fruit products, baking products, or laundry or dry-cleaning services, and beverages other than milk; full-time wholesale salesmen and manufacturers' agents taking orders from wholesalers, and salesmen selling to contractors; industrial home workers.

This action is intended to say definitely that certain persons are covered, although their employe status is in doubt because of contractural or commission relationships.

Most of those prevously excluded, because of such doubt, will come under the program by the inclusion of the self-employed in the new bill.

Work on Tax Boost Starts in Congress

Congress got to work yesterday on a multibillion-dollar tax increase to pay for preparedness.

Without waiting for President Truman's tax message, the congressional staff of tax experts began studying sources of new revenue.

Their orders came from Chairman Doughton (D., N. C.) of the House Ways and Means Committee which writes the tax bills.

Mr. Truman told Congress Wednesday he will ask for new taxes—how much he didn't say—to help finance the extra 10 billion dollars he deemed necessary to build defenses against Communist aggression. He said new taxes would curb inflation and profiteers. His message asking the levies may go to Congress next week.

There was increasing talk of a stiff excess profits tax. Such a levy diverts to the Federal Treasury corporation profits above certain limits.

1. He virtually ruled out any prospect that tax boosts—on corporations or individuals—will become effective before next January 1. He told newsmen "I don't believe in retroactive tax bills. The taxpayer is entitled to have some notice of what he is expected to pay."

2. He said an excess profits tax on corporations "is worthy of serious consideration."

3. He guessed that the timetable on a tax-boosting bill will call for action probably in November or December, or possibly early next year. No lawmakers apparently expect any tax vote before the November elections. Doughton said Congress needs some time to study the needs before it acts.

As far as possible, Doughton told reporters, taxes should be adjusted to put on a pay-as-you-go basis the cost of the Korean war and general preparedness, "without wrecking or shattering our economy."

Mr. Truman laid stress on "profiteering" in his message on the Korean crisis, indicating that he certainly will ask for a substantial excess profits levy.

Experts estimated that if the wartime 85.5 percent rate and base for calculating such profits were restored they would yield about eight billion dollars.

Gannett Names Martin Acting Bureau Chief

Publisher Frank E. Gannett announced yesterday appointment of Paul Martin as acting chief of the Washington bureau of the Gannett Newspapers.

Martin succeeds A. Vernon Croop, chief of the Washington bureau of the Gannett News Service, since 1948, who was named managing-editor of the Rochester (N. Y.) Times-Union.

Senate Crime Probers Hear Pendergast

Kansas City, July 20 (AP).—James Pendergast, Democratic leader and a close personal friend of President Truman, appeared before a closed session of the Senate crime investigating committee late today.

The Kansas City Democratic boss showed up at the Federal building soon after Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) told newsmen he would like to ask Pendergast a "few questions."

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), chairman of the committee making an inquiry into Nationwide crime, said the committee hoped to leave by plane for Washington Friday morning. The committee said it expected to return later for more hearings.

Tobey said he might remain in Kansas City several days. He didn't say what he wanted to question Pendergast about, but said he felt there was a definite connection between the slaying of Charles Binaggio, north side Democratic leader and gambling figure, and the theft of Democratic primary ballots from the courthouse in 1946 during a vote-fraud investigation.

Binaggio and his henchman, Charles Gargotta, were shot and killed last April 5 in a political club on Truman rd. The double slaying never has been solved.

Henry McKissick, who had been right-hand man for Binaggio in his climb to political power, and Eddie (Spitz) Osadchey), race wire front man for Binaggio, testified at the morning session. Tobey said McKissick had nothing important to offer and that Osadchey told how the race wire service was operated here with Chicago connections.

He said the most interesting thing about Osadchey's testimony was how he bought half interest in a gambling place, presumably the Stork Club at Council Bluffs, Iowa, and then got some "other suckers to put up $20,000."

Grand Jury to Look Into Florida Tax Violations

Miami, Fla., July 20 (AP).—A Federal grand jury will meet in September—a month earlier than scheduled—to look into income-tax violations in this area.

Ernest L. Duhaime, Assistant District Attorney, said he expects to present some of the tax cases that were discussed at the Senate crime investigation session here last week.

The committee meeting presided over by Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) recorded that tax officials had questioned the returns of Sheriff James A. Sullivan of Dade County; Sheriff Walter Clark of Broward County; Miami Beach Councilman William Burbridge, and members of the S. and G. gambling syndicate.

Lutzio Freed In Friend's Knife Death

Nicholas J. Lutzio, 42-year-old Bladensburg truck driver, was cleared in Hyattsville Police Court yesterday of a manslaughter charge which stemmed from the knife death of a friend on July 3.

Lutzio was charged after Douglas A. O'Malley was fatally stabbed at the home of Mrs. Margaret Goddard, 4401 Baltimore ave., Bladensburg.

Mrs. Goddard testified she twice summoned Lutzio from his home at 4317 Baltimore ave. to quiet O'Malley down. O'Malley, who was visiting her, had been drinking and became unruly, she sad.

Detective Earl Huber said Lutzio told him O'Malley lunged at him with a kitchen knife during his second visit to the Goddard home. The fatal wound was inflicted during a struggle for possession of the knife.

O'Malley, a tile setter, lived at 230 S st. ne. He was 30.

Swann Held For Jury in Pal's Slaying

Baltimore, July 20 (AP).—Arthur Swann, 16-year-old inmate of the District of Columbia National Training School for Boys, was ordered held for the grand jury today on charges of manslaughter in the shooting of another inmate last January.

The body of 17-year-old Raymond Thorne was found in a remote spot at Fort Meade last Saturday.

Witnesses testified Swann told them two accidental shots killed young Thorne.

The two fled from the school for feeble minded boys last January 14. Swann came back that night but Thorne disappeared.

At the hearing before United States Commissioner Ernest Volkert, Swann said:

"I didn't say I killed him. I told you the gun went off in an accident."

Andrews Base Asks to Use 150 Prisoners

The Air Force may provide a partial solution of the problem of overcrowding at District penal institutions.

Donald Clemmer, director of the District Department of Inspections, told the Commissioners yesterday that the Air Force has offered to provide quarters for about 150 prisoners if they could be assigned to work at Andrews and Billing Air Force Bases.

Clemmer said the proposal had "interesting possibilities." The Commissioners referred it to District Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler. Fowler said he favored the proposal, but would probably seek a ruling from Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West on its legality.

Clemmer reported that inmate population at the four institutions—the jail, Occoquan Workhouse, Lorton Reformatory and the women's division—had remained unusually high since April, when he asked for 20 additional guards. The Commissioners have sought money to hire the extra men in a supplemental appropriation bill now before Congress.

On July 1 the four institutions held 3483 inmates, Clemmer reported. This compared with 2680 a year ago and budget estimates of 2900 for the fiscal year that started July 1, he stated.

The jail held a record high of 1040 on July 4, he said, and 120 workhouse inmates are being quartered in a basement.

Washington Firm Bid Low on School In Montgomery

Bids were opened for the proposed new 30-classroom Eastern Suburban Junior High School yesterday by the Montgomery County Board of Education in Rockville, Md.

Low bidder was John Tester & Sons of Washington, with an offer of $1,150,000, but the next lowest bidder, Blake Construction Co., with a bid of $1,152,828, was still in the running, since both bids were more than the $1,030,000 estimate and some paring of the proposals might result in the second bidder winning the contract, school officials said.

The school is to be built on Old Bladensburg rd. at Franklin ave., Silver Spring, and is to have 30 classrooms, a gymnasium, cafeteria, library, office rooms, shops and home economics rooms.

At a Wedding

D. C. Mother, Soldier Son Meet in Erin

Mrs. O'Donnell Sgt. O'Donnell
Meet at wedding in Ireland

Faith and 'twas a reunion unexpected.

There she was, all the way from the U. S. A. to Ireland, to watch her brother, Peter, wed, and who should be there to stand up with him but that "fine, large brother of a lad," her own son.

This was the experience of Mrs. Catherine H. O'Donnell, a civilian employe at Bolling Air Force Base, who lives at 1643 L st. ne., and who has just returned from Ireland.

Her 22-year-old son, USAF Sergt. Dominic O'Donnell, was the last person she expected to see at the wedding ceremony of her brother, Peter Duncan, in Covh, Southern Ireland. She hadn't seen him in two years.

Sergeant O'Donnell, a radio technician and a veteran of the Berlin airlift, is stationed in Wiesbaden, Germany. But he was on his way to London on furlough, and he stopped over in Ireland for a brief visit. Young O'Donnell, drafted as best man by his uncle, was as surprised to see his mother among the guests as she to see him at the altar.

Sergeant O'Donnell enlisted in the infantry at 16 and was discharged in 1945 after a year and a half of service. He reenlisted at 18..

Mrs. O'Donnell, who came to the United States from Covh back in 1925, has been employed in the Bolling fabric shop since 1943. Sergeant O'Donnell attended St. John's Military Academy here before entering the service.

Truman Cancels Plan To Address Baptists

Cleveland, July 20 (AP).—President Truman sent word today he could not address a Saturday session of the Baptist World Congress.

The President, a Baptist, was invited to visit the six-day congress, but the Korean situation makes it impossible for him to leave Washington, he notified Dr. D. R. Sharpe, general chairman.

A message from him will be read by Dr. C. Oscar Johnson, St. Louis, president of the Baptist World Alliance. Dr. E. McNeil Poteat, Raleigh, N. C., will give the main address.

Lents Forbidden to See Son

Arlington Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy yesterday continued until July 31 a hearing involving custody of 5-year-old Max U. L. Lent, jr.

The judge ruled that neither of the child's estranged parents may visit him at an Arlington Welfare Department home before the hearing is concluded.

The yonngster's mother, Mrs. Mary V. Lent, 28, of Athens, Ohio, agreed yesterday at the judge's suggestion to undergo a psychiatric examination at the county's Mental Hygiene Clinic.

She has charged her husband, Sergt. Max U. L. Lent, sr., of Fort Myer, South Post, had her placed illegally in a Walter Reed Hospital psychiatric ward in order to get the child away.

On Wednesday, a Walter Reed psychiatrist testified that Mrs. Lent's mental state was diagnosed there as "moderately severe" schizophrenia, paranoid type.

Thirty-five members of the Associated Services for the Armed Forces met yesterday at the Pentagon to plan a $3,900,000 fund-raising campaign to start expansion of their organization to a wartime footing similar to the U.S.O. of World War II.

They were told by Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson that "there is no more vital or indispensable phase of the present emergency than the morale of the armed services." There's almost no limit to the job ahead of you."

Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews, chairman of the National ASAF Committee and representative of the National Catholic Community Service, outlined the scope of the undertaking. He said: "It is the obligation of the American people, not the Government, to provide our youth in uniform with programs meeting religious, spiritual, education, welfare, social and recreational needs. The military is behind you."

The ASAF was formed in April as a peacetime successor to USO which was deactivated last year and will not be revived. The new organization acts as a coordinating body for the YMCA, the Jewish Welfare Board and the Catholic Community Service.

Currently the ASAF operates 86 clubs and agencies, including nine overseas.

Immediate plans, which have been sanctioned by the Armed Forces, call for opening 27 new clubs in key areas at home and abroad. If the volume of troop movements increases greatly it is planned to re-establish lounges in transportation centers and enlist civilian volunteers to man them.

The fund drive discussed yesterday is the first phase of a campaign that will ultimately seek $9,600,000 to cover anticipated expenditures up to December, 1951. Other committee members are Frank I. Weil of the National Jewish Welfare Board, and Robert Dechert of the YMCA. They plan to raise the money in most communities through affiliation with local Community Chest drives.

J. T. Corbett Reelected To Engineers Post

Cleveland, July 20 (AP).—John T. Corbett, of 1760 Park rd. nw., Washington, was reelected assistant grand chief engineer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers meeting here today, and also was returned to his post of national legislative representative.

Paris, July 20 (AP).—A few years of extra life is the best that chemical bullets against cancers have produced so far.

But next month, next year, there may be better ones.

All over the world scientists are hunting for them, Dr. Murray J. Shear, chief of the chenotherapy section, National Cancer Institute, Bethesda, Md., told the fifth International Cancer Research Congress today.

Some are found by luck, blind accident. Some by shrewd hunches, or brilliant observations. But others are sought by painstaking trial of thousands of chemicals to capture some that hit cancer cells.

Shear and teams of associates have turned up 100 that kill or cripple cancer cells in mice. A few have affected some forms of human cancers temporarily.

It took six years of time and work to get them. And there were 2000 misses among other chemicals tried.

In this one center, the preliminary test is made by giving a huge slug of a chemical to mice with one form of cancer. A few days later the question is asked: Did it wallop the cancer?

Upward of 100 have, in different degree, against different kinds of cancer, Shear said. But most of the powerful bullets are too poisonous to use.

Chemists work on them. They try to shuffle atoms, take away or add atoms, to get a chemical that will hit cancer harder, longer, without serious bad effects.

In all the ones that work, but not well enough, the big question is how they work, Shear said. Some make cancer cells stop dividing. Some seem to kill the cells. The answers may show how to produce better drugs. Clews as to what chemicals to try can come in odd ways, Shear said.

Wrong Diagnosis

By The Associated Press

The Senate yesterday was asked to correct a mistake of doctors and return Lt. Comd. Edwin M. Rosenberg to the active list of the Navy.

Senator Hunt (D., Wyo.), told the Armed Services Committee that Rosenberg, now an instructor in the Navl Academy at Annapolis, was placed on the retired list two years ago when doctors said he had cancer.

"That diagnosis has proved to be entirely wrong," Hunt told the committee. A pendnig bill would restore Rosenberg to active duty with rank from October 3, 1945.

U. of Georgia Names Head

Atlanta, July 20 (AP).—Dr. O. C. Adehhold, dean of the College of Education, was elected president of the University of Georgia in Athens by the Board of Regents today. Dr. Jonathan C. Rogers, president for two years, was retired effective September 7, when he becomes 65 years old.

Hyattsville Boy, 7, Dies of Polio

old man from the 600 block of Kenilworth ave. ne., admitted to Gallinger Hospital Wednesday, and a 33-year-old woman, who is being treated at her home in the first block of Longfellow st. ne.

The Montgomery County Health Department reported the other case, a 10-year-old boy from the 7900 block of Kentbury dr., Bethesda, who was admitted to Children's Hospital Wednesday.

Prince Georges County raised its total thus far this year to seven by adding the case of a 7-year-old boy from the 2600 block of Southern ave. to its list. The boy, who was admitted to Children's Hospital last Saturday, had been reported first as a District case.

Down in Wytheville, Va., where forty one persons have been stricken with polio and five have died, the Virginia State Health Department is preparing an all-out battle against the epidemic.

A consultant to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis will make a study next week of the Wytheville area and of the polio cases, most of whom are being treated in Roanoke's Memorial and Crippled Children's Hospital.

A Health Department sanitary engineer has already been sent to the town to study the water supply and sewage systems, while another will be sent there this week to supervise the spraying of DDT.

U. S. Toll This Year Is 3194 Polio Cases

A total of 665 new cases of polio were reported in the Nation last week.

Although the number showed an increase over the 478 cases reported the preceding year, it was lower than the 1014 cases reported during the corresponding week of 1949.

In the washington area, the District reported 8 new cases last week as compared to one case for the same week in 1949. Arlington County had one new case last week as compared t none the same week last year.

Statistics remained the same for the two comparative weeks in Montgomery County, which had one new case in each of the weeks; in Prince Georges County, which had two new cases each of the weeks, and in Alexandria and Fairfax County, which reported no new cases in either of the weeks.

Polio cases throughout the Nation from the middle of March, described as the beginning of the "disease" year, through July 15, have totaled 3194, as compared to a corresponding total of 3968 for last year, the highest year on record.

The District has reported 17 during the same period of time, as compared to four during the same time last year. Compaartive figures for Alexandria are one and two; for Arlington County, three and three; Fairfax County, four and none; Montgomery County, two and three, and for Prince Georges County, five and five.

Although the total number of cases in the Nation has been lower, the National Foundation for Infantile Paralyiss has reported giving its chapters more than $500,000 more thus far this year than last year. Expenses for patient care are heavier and the case-load, carried over from last year's epidemic, has been very heavy, it was explained.

U. S. Gives Figures On Polio Over Country

Here is a State-by-State record of polio cases reported this year and for the comparable period of last year, compiled by the National Office of Vital Statistics, United States Public Health Service. The cumulative total for each year begins with the middle of March, since the twelfth week of the calendar year is the average seasonal low week.

Bellport, N. Y., July 20 (AP).—Four children of Edward V. Loughlin, former Tammany Hall Democratic leader, in New York City, have been treated in the past 10 days for poliomyelitis, the family said today.

Lawrence, 3, and Thomas, 4, are still in St. Charles Hospital at Port Jefferson, N. Y. Maureen, 9, and Mona, 10, were taken home today after being pronounced out of danger. The Loughlins have eight children.

Fire Sweeps Rig At Bay Bridge

Annapolis, Md., July 20 (AP).—Flames fed by spurting oil swept the rig and deck house of a floating dredge on the Chesapeake Bay bridge project today.

One unidentified worker jumped overboard but was quickly fished out by the crew of another craft, E. C. Lampman, general project superintendent for the Frederick Snare Corporation, reported.

Three emergency tugs sprayed water on the burning rig. Flames were extinguished in an hour.

Lampman said damage could be repaired. Frederick snare is one of five contractors building the sub-structure of the 43 million dollars bridge from Sandy Point to Kent Island.

Finley Named Head Of Art Commission

David E. Finley, director of the National Gallery of Art, was elected chairman of the National Commission of Fine Arts yesterday.

A member of the commission since 1943, Finley has been closely associated with art circles here both prior to and since his appointment as gallery director in March, 1938.

A native of South Carolina, Finley was assistant counsel of the War Finance Corp. in 1921 and served as special assistant to Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon beginning in 1927.

In 1931, he was an adviser to the American delegation to the London Financial Conference and became Mellon's assistant when he went to London as United States Ambassador.

In other actions, the commission yesterday inspected several suggested sites for the memorial to Mohandas K. Gandhi. It will report on its inspections to J. J. Singh, president of the India League of America.

It also approved design for a commercial building at Indiana ave. and 6th st. nw., and took under study the design for a Francis Scott Key Memorial Flagpole at the site of the dismantled Key home in Georgetown.

Four commission members recently appointed by President Truman attended the meeting. They were Professor Joseph Hudnut, dean of the Harvard University graduate school of design; Edward F. Neild, sr., Shreveport, La., architect; Pietro Belluschi, Portland, Ore., architect; and Felix W. deWeldon, Washington sculptor.

Under Park Unit

Country Club In Bethesda To Be Public

Operation of the old Woodmont Country Club on Wisconsin ave., opposite the Naval Medical Center in Bethesda, as a public golf course and recreation center will begin Friday.

The Recreation Department of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission will take over the property Monday under a license from the Federal Government. The arrangement will continue until the golf course is needed for expansion of the National Institutes of Health building program.

The clubhouse and public golf links will be known as the Glenbrook Golf Club to avoid confusion with the new Woodmont Country Club moving to a site near Rockville.

Federal officials are unwilling to estimate the length of the arrangement but Vice Chairman Blair Lee, 3d, park commissioner of the commission, said it is expected to be at least 10 years.

The golf links will be reduced to a nine-hole course, probably after this year. The clubhouse as a public facility will continue probably longer, Lee said.

Announcement of the country club action culminated four months of negotiation between the U. S. General Services Administration, the Woodmont Country Club and the park planning agency.

"The Government is letting us use the land and the main building without cost," Commissioner Lee said, "and the Woodmont Club has sold us all of the furnishings and equipment, including the pro shop and a very elaborate watering system, for $22,000."

The golf course will be under supervision of Roger Peacock, well-known Washington area pro, who also manages the commission's Sligo Golf Club in Silver Spring. Fees will be $1 on weekdays and $1.50 on Sundays, Saturdays and holidays. The fees will be reduced substantially when the course is cut back to nine holes.

Ex-Store Clerk Held In Charge Slip Scheme

Baltimore, July 20 (AP).—Charles M. Shaw, 29-year-old former Hecht department store credit clerk, was held under bail for grand jury action today on charges of obtaining $4072 worth of clothing and furniture through a charge slip scheme.

Shaw pleaded guilty before Trial Magistrate Julius A. Romano to false pretense charges. About 40 transactions are involved in the charges.

D. C. Income Taxes Mount $400,000

Individual income taxes collected by the District in the fiscal year ended June 30 exceeded 1949 payments by $400,000, District Assessor Edward A. Dent announced yesterday.

Total collections this year on 1949 income totaled $5,043,840 as compared with $4,643,323 collected last year, Dent said.

Tax officials had expected an increase because of the new regulation requiring employers to submit statements on salaries above $1000 paid last year to District residents.

C. A. Beard, jr., income and franchise tax administrator, said the city will now follow up cases of persons listed in these statements who did not file returns, and of others who filed returns this year for the ifrst time.

Income—tax collections from unincorporated businesses increased from $662,804 in fical 1949 to $1,206,170 in fiscal 1950, Dent said. He attributed this chiefly to changes in the tax law that reduced allowable deductions. Corporation franchise tax payments dropped from $6,205,393 in fiscal 1949 to $5,945,051 in 1950. Beard said this was probably due to the fact that more corporations had asked for payment extensions in 1950.

Miller to Seek Third Term

Representative Edward T. Miller (R., Md.) announced yesterday he will seek a third term in Congress from Maryland's First District.

The Eastern Shore representative said he will file his certificate of candidacy for the Republican nomination tomorrow.

A veteran of both World Wars, he is a colonel in the infantry reserve.

Miller, whose election in 1946 made him the first Republican Congressman from his district in 39 years, has been active in legislation on fisheries, shipping, agriculture, soil erosion and conservation.

Stimson's Leg Set; His Condition 'Good'

New York, July 20 (U.P.).—Former Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, 84, spent an hour under an anesthetic today while physicians set his fractured leg.

A spokesman at Doctors Hospital said Stimson took the operation "well" and described his condition as "good." He has been hospitalized since Sunday when he fell at his West Hills (N. Y.) home.

Ban Sought on Enforcing County Rent Law

The Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission decided to ask the Montgomery County Council:

1. That enforcement be discontinued for the time being, or

2. That the zoning ordinance be amended to permit a "reasonable" number of roomers in residential "A" areas, reserved for one-family dwellings.

Vice Chairman Blair Lee, 3d, was instructed to write the council, which has final authority on zoning matters.

Morton Thomas, head of the county department of licenses and inspection, disclosed earlier this week the law would be enforced for the first time in 28 years. He said, however, that the room-renting phase was "only incidental to the more important enforcement of the law against operating businesses in residential property and flats in one-family zoned areas."

A proposed new zoning ordinance for Montgomery County contains a clause to permit roomers in residential "A" property where they do not change the character of the neighborhood.

In another phase of the enforcement program, Assistant County Attorney James S. Lanigan prosecuted a case in Rockville Police Court against Harold B. Atkinson, 8612 Lancaster dr., Bethesda.

Atkinson, a salesman, is charged with operating a commercial business in residential property. He contends that merchandise which he stores in his basement consists of samples not for sale. Lanigan says it violates the zoning law.

No U. N. Coercion

It is probable that Prime Minister Nehru's proposal to seat representatives of the Communist government of China in the United Nations Security Council would achieve his highly laudable purpose—that is, to bring about a peaceful settlement of the Korean conflict. But this is no more than to acknowledge what seems to be recognized by everybody, including the Indian Prime Minister, that the Russians have it in their power to curb the North Korean invaders and effect such a settlement whenever they wish. Secretary of State Dean Acheson was quite right, we think, in replying diplomatically that the decision about China's representation in the United Nations "is one which must be reached by the United Nations on its merits" and that it "should not be dictated by an unlawful aggression or by any other conduct which would subject the United Nations to coercion and duress."

The Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister, Andrei Gromyko, pretends that the war in Korea was started by a dastardly invasion of North Korea from the south. If that were true, the United Nations certainly ought not to be attempting to drive the North Koreans out of South Korea. But all the world this side of the Iron Curtain knows that the war was started, as President Truman put it in his Wednesday evening broadcast, by "an act of raw aggression" by Communist forces, constituting "an outright breach of the peace and a violation of the Charter of the United Nations." In view of this fact the United Nations ought not to be considering anything save enforcing a respect for its authority.

The seating of Communist China in the Security Council would not in itself be much of a price to pay for ending aggression. But it would be a price that would have to be paid over and over again in various forms, always more extortionate. Prime Minister Nehru's proposal was undoubtedly well-intentioned, stemming as it did from his government's consistent efforts to bring about U. N. admission of Communist China. But under present circumstances the granting of that admission would be tantamount to a surrender, on the part of the United Nations no less than on the part of the United States. Neither can afford to purchase peace at any such price.

Reservists To Duty

If the United States is to maintain any sort of ready force against major attack, it is imperative that the military units sent to Korea be replaced. That is the reason for the calling up of limited numbers of National Guard and reserve units. Few if any of these troops may see combat in Korea; but they will take over essential jobs in this country to free other regular forces and keep intact the nucleus of a striking force against aggression. Beyond this, of course, they will provide a sort of backstop, with further training, in case another "police action" should become necessary.

With respect to the National Guard, there arises a difficult question of which units shall be called first. Six of the 27 National Guard divisions have had priority as to equipment; some of the air groups have been equipped with jet planes. However, short of a general mobilization of the Guard, it will be a knotty decision to determine which States should furnish the bulk of the men. Here we hope the armed services will be less concerned with any possible political complaints than with meeting their needs in short order.

The problem with reservists is not so delicate inasmuch as they are not organized on a strictly geographical basis. Aside from the general summoning of all Marine ground reservists, the first calls probably will be concentrated among enlisted and officer specialists and line officers up through the rank of captain, since the reserves are over strength in higher ranks. However, a consideration does arise as to the rank at which reserve officers will be called back. When Army officers were released from active duty after the war, many who had been in grade a certain length of time were promoted to the next higher rank in the reserves. Yet reserve officers who remained on active duty in many cases were forced to drop back a grade. Moreover, reserve officers who now volunteer must go into service at their former grade, whereas those who wait to be called will go in at their new rank. This is a discrepancy which demands the attention of Congress.

As men are drafted and National Guardsmen and reservists go into service, the sacrifice required of them will be substantial. It is not, of course, comparable to the sacrifice of the men now doing the fighting, but it is nonetheless real for men who must leave their jobs and figure out how to support their families. This sort of sacrifice will be borne as similar sacrifices always have been borne in times of necessity; but it will come with better grace if the men in service can feel that the remainder of the people will share the burden and that those who are now enjoying butter will, figuratively speaking, join in making the guns.

Censuring McCarthy

The Republicans in the Senate showed poor judgment in going bail for Senator McCarthy. Their united attempt to prevent the filing of the Tydings subcommittee report condemning Mr. McCarthy's fulminations against the State Department as a "fraud and a hoax" comes about as close as the Senators could to making a party issue out of their colleague's discredited conduct. The treacherous nature of the ground on which they took their stand was made abundantly clear in the devastating speech of Senator Tydings. Yet the votes taken on the issue of filing the report were cast strictly along party lines. The Republicans of the Senate have thus taken upon themselves some of the opprobrium of McCarthyism.

It is especially unfortunate to have this proper rebuke to Mr. McCarthy made a partisan issue at a time when the country urgently needs unity in its firm resistance to Communist aggression overseas. The controversy was not started by the Tydings subcommittee. The subcommittee was created to investigate certain specific charges which Senator McCarthy made and which he promised to prove. He was given every opportunity to submit evidence; and it turned out that he had no evidence. He was allowed to call supporting witnesses; and he called a collection of former Communists, one of whom "blacked out" and ran away, one of whom had nothing to offer save the assertion that the runaway had once been a paid stool pigeon, and one of whom presented hearsay to the effect that certain Communists a decade ago thought they could use Owen Lattimore—called by Senator McCarthy the "top Russian spy" in the United States—to project a propaganda line about China. The subcommittee even secured access to the confidential State Department loyalty files because Mr. McCarthy asserted that those files contained material to corroborate his charges; and it turned out that the files provided no corroboration whatever.

All that the subcommittee did in the end was to call a fraud a fraud. We think its candor was highly commendable in a body which has been all too prone to consider itself a private club and to shield its members from justifiable censure. What would Senator Taft and his Republican colleagues have had the subcommittee say of a performance like Senator McCarthy's? When a Senator is caught in a barefaced falsification, as Senator McCarthy was caught in connection with his Wheeling, W. Va., speech, should the fact be glossed over? When a Senator uses his senatorial immunity from suits for slander to call loyal, conscientious employes of the Government spies and Soviet agents—and then fails to back up the vilification—would the Senate minority let the injustice go unchallenged? When a Senator wantonly plays on popular anxiety in a time of crisis to create doubt and dismay in the minds of his countrymen, should the matter be ignored? If the Tydings subcommittee had done less than it did in exposing Senator McCarthy, it would have insulted the Senate and the people of the United States.

It is absurd to complain that the Tydings subcommittee failed to canvass the whole problem of internal security or to investigate the loyalty of every Federal employe. It was neither commissioned nor equipped to do such a job. It was commissioned by the Senate to discover the truth or falsity of Senator McCarthy's charges. That job it carried out thoroughly and courageously, and the Senate properly recognized its good work by acepting its report. Senator Lodge himself, having looked at the available evidence, refused to go bail for Senator McCarthy. If the Senate now wants a genuine, comprehensive study of the loyalty-security program and of the measures necessary to protect the Government from untrustworthy employes, the subcommittee, like this newspaper, has proposed the one effective mechanism—a commission of eminent American citizens commissioned to do just that job on a wholly unpartisan basis. In addition to this, a motion of censure against Senator McCarthy is clearly in order.

Delayed Reform

The defeat of the Lodge-Gossett resolution to modernize the presidential electoral system ought not to be regarded as a final decision. The vote in the House came at a time when members were preoccupied with the world crisis and were in no mood to give to this domestic reform the thoughtful consideration that it deserves. It is scarcely surprising, in these circumstances, that the resolution fell far short of the two-thirds majority necessary for approval of a constitutional amendment. Reforms of this sort are often slow in coming. Progress has to be measured in terms of public education, and in that respect we think substantial gains have been made. The public is now more fully aware of the dangers that lurk in trusting the choice of the President to "dummies" who are supposed to carry out the will of the people but sometimes do not. A larger number of people also appreciate the inequities of crediting all the electoral votes of a State to the candidate who happens to have a bare majority of the popular vote.

Long and serious consideration of the Lodge-Gossett plan brought its wholehearted acceptance by the Senate. Its failure in the House means that the next Congress will have to begin all over again to modernize our electoral system. Perhaps further refinements can be made in the resolution, but in any event we hope the fight will go on. The objective is too important to be abandoned.

Weapons In Korea

The hope of defeating Communist aggressors, with their unlimited manpower, has never been in matching them man for man or tank for tank. It lies in quality—superior technology and weapons to stop aggression, and then a force using superior arms to hit back. The fruits of this strategy are now being seen in Korea, where the new 3.5-inch rockets and improved bazookas are being used with telling effect against Russian model tanks. Here may be at least a partial answer on the ground to the successes of Communist tanks, with their heavy armor against which lighter American weapons have been of little use.

Technically the larger rockets, which embody the idea of the shaped charge for piercing armor, fall into the category of new weapons developed since World War II. Fortunately, both the bazookas and the ammunition were coming off production lines simultaneously and in sufficient quantity for them to be rushed to our troops. It does not follow, of course, that other new weapons which were so much in the news six weeks ago can be brought to bear so quickly. It may be that the potentialities of these weapons, as respects any immediate aid, were overbought by some enthusiasts. Some are still months or years away—though the time lag ought to be cut. The encouraging thing is that one such weapon is in use. Now the difficulty will be to strike a balance between current production of less effective weapons and the further development of new ones.

Teamwork also has been demonstrated in Korea, not only between the American services, but also with the South Korean divisions which now are evoking the admiration of military men. The Air Force deserves a hand for the manner in which it has established air superiority. Incidentally, earlier impressions that the F-80 jet fighter was inadequate are now receding; when weather has permitted the F-80 has proved effective against both enemy planes and tanks. The main obstacle to closer air support of ground operations has been the weather—though, of course, there cannot be too much emphasis on the importance of joint air-ground training. The Navy, too, has done good work. Not only have carrier planes performed well both as fighters and as bombers, but ships have pounded shore installations and have prevented use of coastal roads. All in all, Americans have cause to be proud of their forces in Korea. And, though supplementary forces from other nations are much to be desired, there is good reason to believe that stabilization will come soon and that a successful offensive will follow.

Return Of The Native

The Belgian Parliament yesterday voted to put an end to the regency of Prince Charles and recall to the throne King Leopold III. This was largely the work of the Social Christian (Catholic) Party. The opposition, consisting mainly of the Socialists, withdrew en masse before the vote was taken. Had they remained it would have made no difference, since the Social Christians, as the result of the recent elections, possess a decisive, yet far from overwhelming majority.

It is precisely this fact that makes the Belgian situation so dangerous in the present configuration of world affairs. It indicates a profound division of the Belgian people that the Communists, who are not less active in Belgium than elsewhere, are certain to exploit. The Socialist opposition to Leopold is implacable and has already given rise to strikes and other demonstrations. At the same time the determination of the Social Christians to restore him borders almost upon fanaticism. A racial—or, more accurately speaking, cultural—question is also involved. Leopold's support comes by and large from the Flemish-speaking section of the population; the antagonism to him comes mainly from the French-speaking Walloons, but it is especially pronounced among the industrial populations of the larger cities, such as Brussels and Antwerp.

To the American mind neither the arguments in favor of Leopold's restoration, nor those advanced against it seem particularly impressive or even rational. The principal objections to Leopold are (1) his conduct during the German invasion in 1940; (2) his behavior as a prisoner of war of the Nazis, and (3) his second marriage to a commoner. On the first count Leopold has been pretty well cleared (despite the accusations made against him by Winston Churchill and Paul Reynaud) by the posthumously published revelations of Lord Keyes, who during the Flanders campaign of 1940 served as chief liaison officer between the British and Belgian forces. On the second point the evidence against Leopold is unconvincing. The third point, however, is not without some validity. Since the idea of birth underlies the whole monarchical principle, Leopold's insistence upon conferring upon his second wife the title of Queen of the Belgians may be considered as in itself an implicit negation of his claim to rule.

However, these questions merely conceal the true nature of the controversy. Rightly or wrongly, what the Socialists and Liberal opponents of Leopold fear in the restoration is a clerical reaction. What Leopold's supporters dread is the ascendancy of a radical and materialistic political philosophy that, whether correctly or not, they consider a prelude to communism. This, like the ever-widening conflict between the Popular Republicans and Socialists in France, explains why the vision of a "Third Force" as the solvent of the political and social problems of western Europe has proved to be so illusory.

Strategy For Peace

Although Americans and United Nations personnel will remember the fighting in Korea with righteous indignation, most men will soon forget it ever started. At this point, the advantages of the United Nations-American position fade, while those of the U. S. S. R. improve.

The United States is not the aggressor, but we are doing the fighting—a long way from home. The invasion of South Korea was Soviet-inspired, but Russia is not involved in the fighting. Within this confusion, custom-built for the creation of doubt and misunderstanding, Moscow can beat the propaganda drums. Even the amplified Voice of America may, by overemphasis, strengthen the Russian contention.

Obviously, we need renewed vigor all along the American diplomatic front. To most suggestions, the State Department gives the reply: we tried that, but the Russians would not cooperate. Of course, it is possible that all conceivable approaches have been used and found wanting. How else, then, can the matter be considered?

Perhaps, by some attention to college football. In the days of Knute Rockne, Notre Dame operated out of a system in depth whereby the Fighting Irish rocked the opposition with the "shock troops," mass substitutions of entire teams as a unit. Time and again opponents were thrown off balance by the sudden infusion of new blood from the Notre Dame bench.

In a similar way, a never-ending wave of alert, American diplomats ought to seek out agreement with the Russians. While competent replacements from the "shock troops" move up, weary and discouraged teams of United States diplomats should be commended for their labors and given a well-earned leave before returning to duty.

Small success with the Russians might be achieved by this process. The effect on our friends throughout the world, however, would be of great significance, almost beyond measure, for the people of the world must believe that the United States is "in there" trying, working hard to secure a just and lasting peace.

"Hoover On The U. N."

Your July 14 editorial on former President Hoover's proposal regarding the United Nations acknowledges that the organization has been able to function in the present crisis because Russia was not present to say no. Nevertheless, it is implied that the other U. N. members are helpless should Russia choose to return and again stymie with her veto any action she did not approve.

Are there, however, no honest and courageous alternatives open to the freedom loving and democratic countries that make up the majority of the membership of the United Nations? There is nothing in the U. N. Charter providing that no charge may be made against an aggressor if that aggressor is one of the great powers. A complaint from the Chinese government of the unprovoked aggression by Russia in their country is, in fact, before the United Nations, and has been for many months. Nor is Communist aggression in China a lone incident.

It is not necessary, as the editorial interprets Mr. Hoover's suggestion, "to boot Russia out" of the U. N. unless she is willing to behave like a civilized member of the community of nations. A frank discussion in the assembly of her crimes against humanity would doubtless insure her permanent exit from the organization. For those who would hesitate to brand the Kremlin publicly for what it is, there is still another recourse which would, in all probability, permit the U. N. to function without further Russian blockades.

Russia has stated that she will not return to the U. N. meetings until her Red stooges in China are admitted to membership in the United Nations and the representatives of the Nationalist government kicked out. The unseating of the legal delegate and the seating of the Communist puppet can be vetoed by the United States. It would be a travesty of justice and the height of hypocritical folly if this Government by refusing to use its veto should permit the legal representative of China to be thrown out of the United Nations and the Red stooge of the Kremlin seated instead.

Peace Counteroffensive

Here is an idea, for what it is worth, for a democratic counter-offensive to the peddlers of the infamous so-called Stockholm "peace" petition who, I understand, are about to invade our community with their Cominform propaganda:

"Since you are in favor of peace, please sign the following petition which I just happen to be carrying with me:

"'Support the United Nations resolutions in defense of the Southern Korean Republic and world peace and justice against the attack of the Communist warmongering, aggressive imperialists, and urge all peoples and nations to support long-prevailing United States resolutions providing for United Nations inspection of all atomic energy developments for peaceful and military purposes.'"

"Revival Of Japan"

This observer would be less than human if he did not stand up and applaud your July 15 editorial, "Revival of Japan."

The sooner we realize the validity of the opinions you have expressed, the sooner we shall get on with the all important business of fighting fire with fire; with furnishing the bulldog with a new set of teeth.

As for the bulldog, I realize that it is always a calculated risk to unchain one, but a leashed dog does a poor job of watching. Besides a caged animal is, as you say, always subject to neuroses and may even attack his feeder.

It is one thing to harbor democratic ideals of what a people should be like; it is quite another to change the time perspective of an entire nation. Korea may have done this for many a Japanese, who watches the American GI entrain for the front remarks: "There, but for the Grace of Bhudda, go I."

"Voluntary" Controls

In a joint statement July 18, Senator Taft and Representative Martin announced their opposition to Government controls until voluntary methods have been thoroughly tested, on the ground that "an ounce of patriotism stimulated by sound Americanism is worth a pound of coercion."

Now, these are shining words, and they will doubtless appeal powerfully and appear reasonable to many individuals. At the same time, they are most satisfactory from the point of view of their authors. It infrequently happens that legislators are able to wax so patriotic, yet serve so well the interests of those among their constituents who are most solvent.

Do Senator Taft and Representative Martin hold the same views regarding those citizens who will shortly be serving in the armed forces on an involuntary basis? Do they feel that it is desirable to rely on voluntary methods in building up the Army? Or do they incline to the view that such procedures would be largely ineffectual?

Protecting Monopolies

It is intersting to note that at the present time there are two proposals in this area to invoke police powers which may result in monopolies and higher prices for the public.

In Alexandria a certain businessman has opened a self-service filling station under a temporary permit pending a regulation for the operation of all service stations. The city council in the last few days passed an ordinance banning self-service stations but this operator appealed to the courts which revoked the ban pending a final determination. The ordinance was passed in the name of safety. It was claimed that self-service stations were a fire hazard.

The chief of the fire prevention bureau of that city stated that these stations are safe. The AAA after a Nation-wide survey claims they are safe. So why the ordinance? It seems a clear case of economic protection for the conventional station owners by cutting down their competition. That adds up to monopoly—created and protected by the law.

Then there is the case in the District of innocent babies risking infection from milk poured from cans which have not been sterilized with live steam. Hearings are being held at the present time to consider a regulation to require the sterilization of milk-handling equipment with live steam for all milk delivered in the District. The farmers who belong to a certain association have the expensive equipment for this sterilization. They now enjoy an 85 percent monopoly on milk delivered here.

The chief health officer in the District claims that chemical sterilization is safe. The United States Public Health Service accepts both steam and chemical sterilization and most of the large cities receive milk under the Public Health Service code. This same association of farmers which is demanding steam sterilization for the safety of District babies produces milk under chemical sterilization for delivery in Maryland where the babies are surely as soft and as tender. Furthermore, chemical sterilization is acceptable in the District for food-handling equipment, such as in restaurants. It seems again that a regulation is proposed as a public protection measure where the real motive lies in economic advantage for a group.

Monopoly born of collusion by competing firms or of the aggregation of huge assets so as to control a market is harmful and likewise against the public interest. However, such monopolies are outside the law and the perpetrators are subject to prosecution. But monopolies born and nurtured by the law are quite safe. It's so nice and cozy.

Truman's $10 Billion Request

By Marquis Childs

Air Force Buildup

WITH 10 billion dollars added to military spending for the fiscal year of 1951 which began on July 1 Pentagon planners believe they will accomplish two things. (1) They will be able to end the war in Korea successfully. And (2) they will make a satisfactory start toward rebuilding America's strength in being at home and abroad quite apart from the Korean conflict.

Roughly half of the 10 billions is to go for Korea and half for building up the three services from the low point of Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson's economy drive. Not all of the five billions for Korea will be shot up since at least a part of it will contribute to the long term buildup of American strength.

It is easy to exaggerate the argument that went on in the White House over the total amount to be recommended in the President's message. But if the figure had been six billions instead of ten, then the margin for building the services would have been slim indeed.

When you add the 10 billions to the 1951 defense figure of $14,500,000,000 and then put on top of that the figure for Marshall Plan aid and military defense for the North Atlantic Treaty powers, you come out with about 30 billion dollars. Assuming no more Koreas, the planners in the Pentagon believe that a figure approximating 25 billion dollars a year will be essential for an indefinite number of years to the security of this Nation.

THE PLEA for the 10 billion figure was particularly urgent from the Air Force. With the share allocated to the air arm it will be possible to add 10 new groups within a period of 15 to 18 months. This will be in addition to the rather shaky 48 groups in being at the present time.

Some idea of the cost of modern war can be gauged by the fact that the B-36s for one strategic bombing group cost about 100 million dollars. This does not, of course, include all the extras and the intensive training of the crews.

Of deep concern to top Air Force officials is the increasing emphasis in public opinion on the tactical air arm. This has been whooped up by early reports from the Korean war to the effect that Air Force planes were not geared to that kind of operation. From this the conclusion has been drawn by some that the tactical branch was seriously deficient both in numbers and types of planes.

Officials responsible for directing the Air Force say this is not true. They point out that a tactical air arm is designed to operate in conjunction with ground forces. There is no reason to have a tactical air arm that is proportionately much greater than the size of the ground force with which it is to function. The tragedy in Korea was that at the outset there were no adequately trained troops on the ground.

IN OTHER words, one half of the team was missing. Consequently, it is unfair to conclude that the tactical arm is either faulty or seriously deficient. Moreover, it is argued, the tactical branch can be built up and planes produced off the assembly line as fast as ground troops are trained to make a rounded team.

The fear of Air Force officials is that Congress will enforce in appropriation measures or in some other fashion an undue emphasis on the tactical. This will then be at the cost of trying to build up branches where deficiencies do cause anxiety.

The conviction still holds that the principal—the pessimistic would say only—shield against wholesale Communist aggression is the strategic air force now in being. This force has the power to carry atomic bombs to the enemy. To fail to build it up would be to permit that shield to decline in effectiveness.

Part of the added money for the Air Force will go to speed up research and development. There has been a serious lag here. And with this realization is the growing awareness that in all probability the Russian capacity in this direction has been greatly underestimated. That has long been an American trait—to overestimate our own powers and to underestimate a potential enemy.

Finally the continental air defense of the United States is to be strengthened with part of the allocation to the Air Force. These are all steps of the first importance to the safety of every American citizen.

That is a fact which Congress can take in. The prayerful hope of those who are planning these steps toward greater security is that there will be time in which to take them.

"New Looks"

I have just read your "New Look" editorial of July 13 and I have also noted from time to time your "fashion forecaster's" glib remarks about the lofty (morale lifting, etc.) duties of clothes designers, and other such vacuous palaver.

While I applauded the sober twist your editorial did take, I couldn't help thinking what a pity you didn't set your sights on that morally vulnerable target, the fashion industry, whose cynical aim is to glorify the superficial, nourish snobbery, and make virtues (and a neat profit) of extravagance, avidity, and discontent.

A Communication

Butler's Opposition To Hawaii Statehood

By Joseph R. Farrington
Delegate to Congress from Hawaii

THE minority report of Senator Hugh Butler on statehood for Hawaii appears in the last 12 pages of the 59-page report of the Senate Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs. His report holds that the present is "a peculiarly inappropriate time to consider granting statehood to the Territory of Hawaii." He charges "there is a large and well-organized fifth column, devoted to the cause of our potential enemies in the Territory" that would create for the military establishment a serious security problem in the event of hostilities.

He then makes this statement: "Communist strength in Hawaii is far, far greater than in any part of the continental United States. It is so great that it controls the one large labor union there. It has infiltrated and has secured what may be a controlling influence over one of the two major political parties. It has permeated other institutions of the Territory to the point where its influence is felt everywhere."

The foregoing statement is false and misleading. Communist activity in the Territory has been the object of extensive investigation since the conclusion of World War II. The question has received the careful attention of every committee of Congress which has investigated statehood since 1946. It was the object of a special investigation of the House Committee on Un-American Activities in April of this year. This committee had the benefit of the work not only of its own staff but of the FBI and the naval and military intelligence in Hawaii.

This committee's finding does not support Senator Butler's allegation that "Communist strength (in Hawaii) is far, far greater than in any part of the continental United States." The committee found on the contrary that Communist activity in Hawaii was no more extensive than in the States and was closely integrated with it. It found that 90 percent of the Communists were identified with only one union and that their number, never more than 160, was declining and today was probably less than 60.

THE CHAIRMAN of the committee which conducted this investigation, Representative Francis Walter of Pennsylvania, and the ranking minority member, Representative Harold Velde of Illinois, a former member of the FBI, both appeared before the Senate committee shortly after returning from Hawaii in support of statehood for Hawaii.

Every member of the investigating committee was deeply impressed with the intense and intelligent interest of Hawaii's people in this problem and their determination to deal vigorously with it. They believed the promise of statehood would intensify and strengthen their efforts to do it.

The minority report fails to point out the steps taken by the Legislature of the Territory and any number of civic organizations to deal with this problem. It fails to point out that most of the witnesses from both the States and Hawaii who testified in support of statehood were fully aware of the Communist problem in Hawaii. It is not reasonable to believe that the President, the Secretary of Defense and any number of responsible persons in Hawaii and in the States would be asking that Hawaii "be admitted to the Union if the facts in any way warranted the conclusions of the minority report.

The minority report refers to the "one large labor union" in Hawaii, by which it means the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union. But the report fails to point out that there are many other strong labor organizations in Hawaii not in any way affiliated with the ILWU. Although the ILWU is the largest of the unions in point of membership, it is but one of many unions, most of which have affiliations in the States. The situation in this respect is not dissimilar to that in most industrialized areas. There is not one big union embracing all unions as the report indicates.

THE ILWU, as its name indicates, is not a local, but an international organization. Its officers make their headquarters in San Francisco where its policies are determined. The president and two of the principal officers have recently been convicted of perjury and the organization is facing suspension from the CIO for Communist activity. It is plain from this that the problem presented by Communist activity in this organization is one that must and is being dealt with on a national basis.

This union derives its strength principally from the fact that it controls shipping on the Pacific Coast and from the Coast to Hawaii. During the longshoremen's strike of 1949 the people of Hawaii were able by reason of action taken by their own Legislature to load and unload ships in Hawaii, but not on the Pacific Coast. The Federal Government was unwilling to take the steps necessary to sustain shipping between the islands and the Coast.

The experience of Hawaii during this strike, the complete dependence of Hawaii on transportation is not an argument against statehood. It is an argument for statehood. The people of Hawaii would then be able to give to their demands and needs the force to their representations that can only come with the right to vote and there would be no doubt as to the responsibility of local officials in dealing with the problem.

Infiltration of labor unions by Communists is not peculiar to the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and certainly not to Hawaii. It has happened and continues to be a problem in many parts of the country. It certainly is not a reason for denying Hawaii's people their rights as American citizens.

MOREOVER, this same technique has been followed in political parties both nationally and in many localities in the States. The fact that Communists undertook to infiltrate the Democratic Party organization of Hawaii is not in itself unique. The same charge has been made with respect to the Democratic Party nationally and in several States. The problem, moreover, is not one that is confined to the Democratic Party. There are, in fact, minority parties in some State where Communist sympathizers are said to predominate.

The leading Democrats of Hawaii are dealing with the problem of Communist infiltration and the settlement of their own disputes with great vigor. There is every promise that under the spur of the prospect of statehood they will be successful in overcoming these difficulties.

The real test, however, of Communist influence in the political life of Hawaii is the extent to which it has been successful in electing officials to office. The franchise is widely held and exercised in Hawaii. The record of the general election of 1948 and of the election of delegates to the State constitutional convention in 1950 prove beyond question that communism and its sympathizers are without any influence and support of any consequence in Hawaii.

The high level achieved in the economic, cultural and spiritual development of Hawaii is in itself the best possible safeguard against the threat of Communist influence. The testimony presented to the Senate Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs shows that Hawaii has developed an economy that has brought the average income above that of the average of the United States; an excellent public school system with standards well above that of the average State, and a community life that in all respects measures up to the best traditions of this country.

SENATOR BUTLER finds further opposition to statehood on two additional grounds. The first is noncontiguity—the fact that Hawaii is not joined to the continent. The second is what the report describes as the "Oriental traditions" of the people.

The points raised in the report of these two issues and the allegations in the report concerning the character of Hawaii's people have been completely disproven by the findings of every congressional investigation except that conducted by Senator Butler personally.

Today 90 percent of Hawaii's people are American citizens. Most of them have achieved this status by birth in this country and not by naturalization. Many of the Americans of Oriental ancestry in Hawaii are now in the third and fourth generation of their American citizenship. Their record as American citizens both in peace and in war has been to the overwhelming majority of our people and the people of the United States the final and complete answer to the doubts raised by Senator Butler. Their complete loyalty to the American way of life and their capacity to assume the full responsibilities of citizenship has been demonstrated beyond the question of a doubt.

It would be most unfortunate for the country therefore to allow this point of view to prevail. It would seriously prejudice our position throughout the Pacific. It would do irreparable harm to our reputation for fair play and justice in the Far East. It would bring into question our sincerity and play squarely into the hands of our Communist foes. The conditions that have arisen in the Far East make it imperative that the prejudice against people of Oriental origin that finds expression in this minority report be completely and emphatically rejected. The most effective and surest way to do this is to give Hawaii statehood immediately.

degrees in little more than three hours. The temperature had reached a high of 90 at 4:25 p. m. but was down to the day's low of 67 at 7:40 p. m.

The Weather Bureau promised considerable cloudiness and cooler temperatures today. The high is expected to be about 80.

The Clarendon Fire Department made an emergency run to Lee blvd. and N. Rhodes st., North Arlington, after a passerby reported a child had been washed through a 30-foot culvert under the intersection.

Chief H. M. Mills said he was told the child had been playing on the upstream side, near the mouth of the culvert, when the deluge struck.

The child emerged on the downstream end of the culvert, which is three and a half feet in diameter, and ran away, apparently more wet than hurt.

An unidentified man was washing his automobile in Four Mile Run, along the 2800 block of Glebe rd., Alexandria, when the flash flood hit.

He saw the 5-foot crest coming and led his wife and child, who were in the car, to safety. The wall of water turned the car on its side and swept it 100 feet, from the Alexandria side of the stream to its Arlington bank.

Here in the District the police two-way radio kept hot with a running commentary of damage and trouble occasioned by the storm.

These calls were spiced with a now-and-then light item such as:

"Boy inside school at 5th and Decatur sts. nw. shooting off firecrackers."

At Bladensburg rd. and Montana ave. ne., water swelled up past the hubcaps of cars and traffic was detoured around the intersection for more than 30 minutes.

The Fire Department also sent equipment to the scene to handle wires that had been whipped down by the driving storm.

Flood conditions were also reported at Portland and S. Capitol sts., and at 19th and E sts. nw., near Emergency Hospital.

At 10th st. and Spring rd. nw., a manhole "floated" away when it was blown from a sewer opening by the pressure of accumulated water.

than two million dollars in physical improvements in the annexation zone—if it won.

But Fairfax County lawyers challenged each city claim as it came up.

They denied flatly that Falls Church is essential to the lives of annexation strip residents, since the city has "no commercial center" and all but one of its schools are county-operated.

They predicted that if Falls Church got the land, it would exceed its statutory debt limit trying to care for it.

Not only that, they said, the present City Council is "plunging the city into debt," and Falls Church simply could not handle the new acquisition financially.

Fairfax attacked the city's roads, storm drainage, police force, lack of sidewalks, and school system. If Falls Church can't take care of its own people, Fairfax said in effect, how can it provide for several times as many?

Fairfax also challenged the city's estimate of what Falls Church would have to pay to assume schools and other facilities in the event of annexation.

Falls Church estimated it should pay $79,000 for sewers it would take over, Fairfax said it should be $1,200,000. The city thought $1,052,911 would be a fair price for the schools, the county estimated $1,303,551.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

Counting The Cost

PRESIDENT HARRY TRUMAN has again acted with courage and common sense. He has rejected the advice of those who were urging on him a policy of "little steps for little feet." Instead, he has frankly named the minimum sum it will cost to reverse the policies of his Secretary of Defense and start this country back on the long road toward real military strength.

Here two facts are worth noting. First, as Truman hinted, the 10-billion-dollar-sum he has asked Congress to appropriate is no more than a first installment on the bill we shall have to pay. Second, as Truman did not hint, at least four billion dollars of this bill represents the net dollar cost of Louis Johnson's experiment in "economy."

To prove the first point, it is only necessary to tot up the total of what is now clearly required. Take the Navy first. Over-all, the best estimate is that Johnson has reduced the combat capabilities of the Navy by 30 percent. It must now be obvious that the first order of business is to restore the pre-Johnson level of Navy combat power. The most competent naval authorities estimate that this will require three billion dollars this year, if the Navy is to be restored to its pre-Johnson strength within a year and a half to two years.

The same time-lag applies to the effort to rebuild the serious American Air Force which was in prospect before Johnson took over. The Johnsonian reductions in American air strength must await a further detailed report. Here it is enough to say that, since Korea, the Joint Chiefs of Staff have agreed unanimously that it will not be enough to return even to the pre-Johnson level of Air Force power.

INSTEAD, the Joint Chiefs are convinced that the 70-group Air Force, long recommended by every competent authority, has now become absolutely essential. Johnson initially resisted this view, but he has apparently been overridden. At any rate, preliminary Air Force estimates are that it will now require an immediate capital investment of four billion dollars to five billion dollars to start the Air Force toward 70 groups, with reasonable rapidity.

That leaves only two billion dollars or three billion dollars out of Truman's 10 billion dollars for the Army, where the talk about the magical weapons, which have supposedly made the tank and the infantry Army obsolete, has now died to an inaudible whisper. Two or three billion dollars will hardly be enough to make a start toward recreating the two divisions axed by Johnson; organizing six to eight wholly new divisions; restoring the gutted strength of existing divisions, and creating a serious armored force.

As for the cost in time, it takes at least a year and a half to train an infantryman for modern warfare. Gen. Joseph Collins is the authority for the statement that it will need "years" to transform the cardboard mock-ups, which now symbolize the virtually nonexistent American armored force, into the real thing. And when the new tanks begin to reach the production stage, Army spending will shoot up.

Since no final estimates have been made, the dollar figures given above are not precise. But they are enough to show that the President's figure of 10 billion dollars, massive as it is, may not be enough even for the first installment on American rearmament. Moreover, as Truman implied, three or four billion dollars more are needed to make the Military Aid Program a reality, instead of the sham it now is. Thus, the total extra appropriations this year may well top 14 billion dollars, even if the fighting in Korea goes better than is now anticipated.

AT LEAST four billion dollars of these 14 billion dollars, moreover, represent sheer waste. For it is now clear that the Johnsonian "economy" program has been about as economical as driving a car by alternately slamming on the brakes and speeding up to 60 miles an hour. The case of the Navy best illustrates why this is so.

It is a reliable Navy rule-of-thumb that it costs as much to deactivate and mothball a ship as it does to run the ship on ready status for a year. It then costs as much again to de-mothball the ship and ready it for combat. Thus Johnson's 30 percent reduction in Navy combat strength has by no means been reflected in an equivalent saving in the taxpayers' money. And although it would have cost the taxpayers only about one billion dollars to maintain the pre-Johnson level of naval strength, it will cost three billion dollars to reach that level again, for a total loss of about two billion dollars.

What is true of the Navy is also true of the Army and Air Force. It is thus reliably estimated that the net dollar cost of Johnson's "economies" will work out at between four billion dollars and five billion dollars. This money might just as well have provided a huge bonfire, for the edification of the taxpayers, for whose welfare Johnson has always expressed such solicitude. It is at least good that Truman has now totally reversed the policies which have been so costly as well as so hideously dangerous. But it is difficult to understand why a man whose follies have been on so colossal a scale should retain so vital a post.

The President's Calling List

WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, JULY 21, 1950

DiMaggio's Hit Beats Tigers in 11th, 6-5

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

IF I AM being suckered into a publicity blurb for the MGM picture "Three Little Words," that is due for release next month, I can't help it. I can take my movies, leave them alone or just turn my head and pretend they don't ever happen, but I am a push-over for a baseball-struck guy like Harry Ruby.

There he was out there at Griffith Stadium the other night, 54 years old, arrayed in a Washington uniform, taking infield practice with the Nats, and happy enough to kiss the song-writing business goodby forever. He's so daffy about baseball, he ain't living unless he's in spiked shoes.

Povich

If Ruby isn't the country's No. One baseball fan, he at least rates the label until some balmier character comes along to beat his record. Like the time he flew into Boston from California to see the opener of a Red Sox-Yankee series, planed back to Hollywood that night, and with good luck was able to catch the last game of the series in Boston.

With Ruby, that sort of daffiness has been going on for most of 30 years. I saw him 20 years ago, working out with the Nats in Biloxi, Miss. He is show business' most famous frustrated ball player.

THEY MAKE much of that in the documentary picture of his life, with Fred Astaire and Red Skelton portraying the song-writing team of Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby who tapped out a grist of hit tunes. Not over-drawn at all, say Ruby's friends, are the sequences which show Skelton, as Ruby, sitting at the piano with a fielder's mitt in his hip pocket.

Ruby was the second baseman for P.S. 42, up in the Bronx, where Al Schacht was pitching 'em to the city championship, but the closest he ever came to playing in the big leagues was that day in Baltimore in 1930. That was when the Nats were playing the Orioles in an exhibition, and Ruby took over for Buddy Myer for one inning. He got his name in the Nats' box score and promptly bought out all available editions of the Baltimore Sun, to prove it.

When he plays in those artists-writers-celebrities games in Hollywood, it is with no borrowed uniform. He proudly wears the "No. 4" uniform that Joe Cronin gave him after the 1946 World Series. Cronin ignored the league rules to let Ruby sit on the bench in that series, and indulged him by letting him take over first base from Rudy York in infield practice.

"IT'S SMALL boy stuff, I guess," says Ruby, "but I can't get baseball out of my blood. I know that song publishers who gave me deadlines used to think I was crazy when I talked baseball instead of songs. But like some people like fishing, I like baseball. I put on a suit and get the feeling of doing what I want most. It gives me contentment and freedom of mind, like all my debts were paid."

He was saying, too, that the song-writing business is a lot more hectic than it used to be. "The romance has gone out of it, along with a lot of the profits. Trying to keep up with the demand now for songs for the radio and the juke boxes is like trying to feed a furnace. The disc jockeys beat a song to death in a couple of months, and the old sheet-music days were better."

When they wrote "Oh, What a Pal Was Mary," Ruby and Kalmar split $90,000 in profits from their royalties on sheet music and player-piano rolls and the life of the song as a hit tune was six months, he says. "Now you write a hit tune and it's competing with 300 others, and you're lucky to split a $20,000 take."

THE IRONY is, Ruby points out, that songs now have an audience as great as 10 million a night over the radio, yet aren't so profitable. "When I first started out as a $35 a week song plugger, we'd play our songs for free in five movies a night and then tour the rathskellers hoping the folks would like our stuff and buy the sheet music. One hit song wouldn't catch up with the next one for six or eight months, and the sales used to be pretty good."

In "Three Little Words," Ruby's passion for baseball and Kalmer's obsession for practicing his parlor magic is faithfully documented. "He thought I was crazy, and I thought he was a dope for fooling around with all his magic props. I didn't understand Skelton in my part, either. The big guy throws a baseball like a girl. But you can never tell what a fellow's hobby is. I found out that Skelton's was painting in oils."

Ruby lit out for Boston after the Nats' game, on an important matter of business. The Red Sox, you see, were playing the Tigers, and Harry figured that one would be nice to see. Also, his pal, Cronin, would let him work out with the Red Sox before the game. Man, he's living.

'Wondrous' Cincy Reds Spank Bums, 3-1 and 6-2

Cincinnati, July 20 (AP).—The wondrous Cincinnati Reds bagged both ends of a twi-night doubleheader from the Brooklyn Dodgers tonight, winning the first, 3-1, on Ken Raffensberger's effective hurling and the nightcap, 6-2, with a four-run eruption in the seventh. Ted Kluszewski hit his seventeenth homer in the opener.

Cincinnati's amazing brigade now has won 21 of its last 29 games and has captured five straight doubleheaders.

Young Chris Van Cuyk and Red-leg Veteran Ewell Blackwell engaged in a tight pitching duel in the tail-ender.

Kluszewski Tough Guy

A walk, two singles and Kluszewski's long liner produced two runs in Cincinnati's half of the first. Brooklyn shaved the lead to 2-1 in the fifth on three singles. The hulking Kluszewski's homer into right-field bleachers in the sixth ended scoring.

Giants Thrash Cards, 13 to 3

St. Louis, July 20 (AP).—The New York Giants thrashed the league-leading St. Louis Cardinals, 13-3 here tonight to gain revenge for two severe beatings yesterday.

Five double plays helped the cause of Dave Koslo, who got credit for the victory after allowing nine hits. Erv Dusak did a splendid relief job for the Cardinals, holding the Giants scoreless in the last five innings by giving up but three hits.

Riddick took a wide throw and had to lunge back to the bag. Miller (left) was called out by Umpire Eddie Ackerman. No. 5 won, 2-0

Phils Bow, Slip To 3d; Kiner Slams No. 27

Pittsburgh, July 20 (AP).—In a nip and tuck slugfest that lasted almost three hours the Pittsburgh Pirates edged out the Philadelphia Phils, 10-8, today. The brawl worked out eight different pitchers.

The victory was the second in a row by the cellar-dwelling Bucs over the Phils, a top contender for the National League pennant. It dumped the Phils into third place, two percentage points behind the rained-out Boston Braves.

Slugger Ralph Kiner added to the Pirate achievement by swatting his twenty-seventh homer in the last of the eighth for the final run.

Murry Dickson, the last of three Buc pitchers, copped the victory. Blix Donnelly, who relieved Starter Bob Miller, was charged with the loss.

Chambers' downfall was caused by fat pitches given to Del Ennis, Granny Hamner and Dick Sisler that went for homers. Sisler's put the Phils ahead in the fifth and ended Chambers' tour of duty, who left in favor of Vernon Law. Law was relieved by Dickson in the seventh.

Dom Doubles Goodman In; Houtteman Batted Hard

Boston, July 20 (AP).—Dom DiMaggio pulled the Boston Red Sox into a 6-5 victory over the top-place Detroit Tigers by doubling in Billy Goodman with an 11th inning winning run today in a breath-taking contest that was rained on most of the time.

The Tigers did all their scoring before Walter Masterson was replaced by Chuck Stobbs with none out in the fourth.

Before Stobbs came in to pitch in sensational fashion, Pat Mullin, a right field replacement for Vic Wertz, out with an injured instep, gave the Tigers their third and fourth runs by hitting an inside-the-park homer.

Two singles which sandwiched Johnny Pesky's triple gave the Red Sox two runs in the fifth and Bobby Doerr's thirteenth homer cut the Tigers' lead to 5-4 in the eighth.

Art Houtteman, who went the entire route, found himself deadlocked in the ninth when he walked two batters and gave Junior Stephens a chance to single in his ninety-sixth run of the season.

During the overtime affair, the third succesful one in the six the Red Sox have been called upon to play this season, their Walt Dropo dropped behind the Tigers' George Kell in the major leagues' hitting competition by one-thousandth of a point, .3526 to .3525.

Few Visitors, Lots of Mail

Ted Williams Leaves Hospital, Hopes to Play in Six Weeks

BOSTON, JULY 20 (AP).—Ted Williams, his injured left elbow supported in a sling, left the hospital today hopeful of returning to the Red Sox lineup sooner than his doctors expect.

"I hope to be back much sooner than they think, but I'm not going to take any chances and rush things," the American League slugger told newsmen before going home.

"I think I'll have good movement in the arm and be able to play in six weeks," Williams said hopefully.

But his doctors, Orthopedic Surgeon Joseph Shortell and Joseph McCarthy, club physician, are doubtful if Ted can return again this season. They said that only a piece of the radius bone in the elbow was taken out in the operation last Thursday, and "we'll have to wait and see how it heals."

Ted reported that he had very few visitors while confined in Santa Maria Hospital in nearby Cambridge, but he had received "a tremendous amount of fan mail."

Among his visitors were Tom Yawkey, the Red Sox owner who sat with his star and watched a telecast of a game; Joe Cronin, the club's general manager, and Manager Lou Boudreau, Lary Doby and Luke Easter of the Cleveland Indians.

How does Ted feel about the annual classic between the two leagues?

Marrero Given Another Shot At Cleveland

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Cleveland Indians who are thinking in terms of the pennant—for themselves, of course, will move into Griffith Stadium tonight and meet up with an old pal, and they do mean pal.

It's Chico Marrero pitching for the Nats, and thus far he has befriended the Indians more than any other pitcher in the league this season. They've been doting on the Cuban pitching fare he serves up, have pinned his ears back both times he started.

Mostly, the Indians have been specializing in home runs against the little Cuban righthander. Marrero has pitched 11 homers to the Nats' opposition this season, and nine of them were swatted by the Indians.

Al Rosen, the Indians' rookie third baseman who is leading the league in homers, owes his distinction in no small part to Marrero. He has personally pounded Chico for four of 'em.

In fact, Manager Bucky Harris was tempted to change his pitching plans for today after the White Sox left town following last night's rains which washed those Nats right out of their hair.

Marrero was supposed to pitch last night and Harris had Sid Hudson ready for today. But Harris decided to give Chico another shot at the Indians and reserve Hudson for tomorrow night with Bob Ku-

Philadelphia, July 20 (AP).—Sam Zoldak pitched and batted Cleveland to within four and one half games of the American League lead as the Indians scored a 3-2 11-inning victory over Philadelphia tonight for a clean sweep of the three game series.

Ferrier's 65 Leads St. Paul

St. Paul, Minn., July 20 (U.P.).—Jim Ferrier, the lusty swatter from San Francisco, took the first-day lead in the $15,000 St. Paul Open golf tournament today with a seven-under-par 65 at tricky Keller course.

The Australian-born veteran put together rounds of 32 and 33 to lead runnerup Skee Riegel, the 36-year-old Tulsan who has been a professional less than a year, by a single stroke. Riegel matched three under par rounds of 33.

Henry Ransom, 1946 St. Paul titlist from St. Andrew's Ill., and Skip Alexander of Knoxville, Tenn., were bracketed with two lesser-known pros—Bill Nary of Chino, Calif., and Ted Kroll of New Hartford, N. Y.—at 67.

The favored "name" players trailed. Defending champion Jimmy Demaret of Ojai, Calif., couldn't make his putts drop and had a mediocre 75. Sammy Snead, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. ace who won the Western Open last year also had trouble on the greens, but rallied for a 70 total after soaring to 37 on the first nine.

Yale Star Tops World Record

Seattle, July 20 (AP).—John Marshall of Yale and Australia, and Ford Konno of Hawaii, both bettered the world record for the mile swim today in preliminary races opening the 1950 A.A.U. men's outdoor swimming championships.

Marshall won the first heat in 20:09.6 to smash by nearly 20 seconds the 20.29 mark set in 1942 by Keo Nakama of Hawaii. Along the route Marshall wrecked four American records and his mile time also bettered the American standard.

Konno, much smaller than Yale's Australian import, went the mile in 20:22.3. He was not timed at intermediate distances. The surprise performance by Konno pointed toward a terrific battle tomorrow evening in the mile finale.

Along the way, Marshall reset the 550-yard American record at 6:05.1, the 1000-yard at 11:18.3, the 1000-meter at 12:46.6 and the 1320-yard at 15:04.

Ralph Flanagan of Miami held three of the old records. He set the 1000-yard mark at 11:37 and the 1320-yard standard at 15:27.8 in 1937.

St. John's Stadium Gets Funds From Dads' Affair

The new St. John's College stadium, now under construction, will get a big financial lift, thanks to the men of St. John's dads' booster club, which is donating all the profits from its annual carnival to the stadium fund. Now in progress at 27th st. and Military rd., nw., site of the new school, the carnival is expected to net more than $10,000 for the athletic plant, which will have lights and is designed to accommodate a crowd of 10,000.

Satch Paige May Wind Up in Majors Again

Giants May Sign Ageless Hurler 'If Army Don't Call Me'

NEW YORK, July 20 (AP).—Satchel Paige, the rubber armed pitching veteran, might become a major league ballplayer again—and sooner than anyone thinks.

Both Mel Ott and Carl Hubbell of the New York Giants front office were on hand when the ageless hurler went three innings in an exhibition game last night.

Neither Ott nor Hubbell would comment on whether the Giants are interested in signing Paige. They just "came to see the game." However, when Paige was lifted after his three-inning stint, both made a quick exit.

Paige was equally non-committal. "I've had offers from two clubs, but I'd rather not say which two," he said.

Ol' Satch, as he is known to his teammates, is eager to get back to the majors.

"I'd like very much to go back into the big leagues for another year or so before I quit," he said. "That is, of course, if the Army doesn't draft me. You know, they're drafting us young fellows again," he laughed.

Paige, who like Topsy, "just growed," admits to 43 or "thereabouts" and is in fine physical shape. The stomach trouble which plagued him all last season and caused him to double up in the bullpen of the Cleveland Indians has disappeared. His gastric woes were due to his bad teeth, all of which have since been removed. He weights in at 192 pounds.

"I'm the healthiest I've ever been and the heaviest I've ever been," he said.

Although his opposition is not as keen as it was in his Cleveland days, he said the various Negro leagues have some powerful hitters.

"Most of the time, though, I just toss about nine or ten warm-ups and then go out to the mound," he said. "I give these kids the fast stuff and curves for the first two innings and then change ups the rest of the time. I get them out."

"Everybody asks me when am I gonna quit. Well I'm beginning to ask myself now. People say my arm is made of whale bone and I'm starting to believe them. But as long as I can fog them past those batters I'll be in there. You see I love baseball and I love to pitch."

London, July 20 (AP).—Prince Ali Khan has named a horse after his wife, movie actress Rita Hayworth.

Franklin Also Wins At Denver

Denver, July 20—Two Washington area entrants in the USGA National Junior Tournament survived second round play here today, but three others, including Denny Bolster, Middle Atlantic junior champion, fell by the wayside.

Billy Wolfe, The Washington Post schoolboy champion of Devitt Prep, defeated John Ward, Midland, Tex., 2-1, and Ellsworth Franklin, jr., won from Alen Birmingham, Coropolis, Pa, 2-1.

Otherwise the outlook for Washington was dark indeed. Bolster, who went to the quarter-finals last year, took a strong early lead over Lester Kelly of Atlanta, Ga., but slipped badly in the returning nine holes to lose 3-2.

Bill Ball, captain of Western High's championship golf team, lost his match to Tom Gillespie of Cincinnati, Ohio, 2 up, and 15-year-old Perky Cullinane, the District Junior Champion, who hails from St. John's Prep, bowed to John Johnson of Oklahoma City, 2 up.

Bolster looked like a sure winner as he took the third hole with a par four and then built a 2 up lead, winning the fifth with another par four.

Charles Will Box Beshore

Buffalo, N. Y., July 20 (AP).—Ezzard Charles, the NBA heavyweight champion, will defend his title here August 15 in a 15-round bout with Freddie Beshore, Promoter Dewey Michaels of the Fairview Athletic Club said tonight.

Michaels said both fighters had agreed to the new date for the twice-postponed match.

It will be an indoor show in Memorial Auditorium.

The announcement indicated a clear victory for Michaels, who had been fighting to retain the bout against promoters whose offers probably would have been more lucrative for Charles.

It will be the champion's first fight since recovering from a strained heart muscle.

There was no comment immediately from Jake Mintz, Charles' manager, or Ralph Gold, who handles Beshore.

In New York, Gold said he agreed to the new date in a phone conversation with Michaels.

It's Time to Have Your Boat Inspected By Coast Guard Auxiliary—and It's Free

THE COAST GUARD'S SYMBOL OF A SAFE BOAT

The arrival of summer and the resultant enthusiasm of pleasure boat owners to ready their vessels for the 1950 boating season brings into focus an important public service of the U. S. Coast Guard Auxiliary—the annual courtesy motorboat inspection program.

For inspection purposes, the term "Motorboat" means any machinery propelled pleasure craft 65 feet or less in length, including sailboats with power.

The boat is checked for safety equipment and maintenance methods required by law. The inspector also advises the owner of Coast Guard recommendations on items not legally required, but considered essential and desirable for improved safety, convenience and peace of mind.

Thus the owner, at no cost to himself, receives the benefit of expert advice on the condition of his boat and equipment, as well as suggestions on corrective measures if defects are found. Frequently, a danger of which he is unaware is brought to light during the inspection.

No official action is taken when an owner's boat fails to pass the inspection nor is he reported.

Play it safe. It pays off in lives. A call to Captain Carney at National 2594 will assure you of an early inspection at your convenience. Be sure to display the approved decal on your windshield.

Only those boats displaying the decal for 1950 can be sure they will not be boarded for routine check of equipment, and only the Coast Guard Auxiliary inspector can award you a 1950 decal. HAPPY WALKER.

Wally Campbell Tonight's Crowd Choice at Lanham

Wally Campbell, crowd pleaser from Trenton, N. J., again will be the sentimental favorite tonight in the modified stock car racing at the West Lanham, Md., Speedway.

Campbell scored a smash hit with 6000 spectators last week when he used three cars while taking third place in the 25-lap feature event won by Neil Cole.

Wally won his qualifying heat in a No. 11 machine that was demolished in the second semifinal, came back to finish runnerup while handling Frank Schneider's No. 88 car in the consolation race, and then changed over into Preston Welsh's No. 41 job to move up zava in reserve for the Sunday game. "Chico looked good in his last start when the Browns beat him, 2-0," said Harris, "and he deserves another chance. Anyway I think he'll pitch differently to the Indians this time.

Griffs Play Tribe Tonight

Harris was presuming that the Nats would get Mike Garcia or Early Wynn as Marrero's pitching opponent. Garcia was belted out early by the Red Sox in his last start and Wynn figured in relief in that contest.

In recent games, Boudreau has been back at his old job at shortstop replacing Ray Boone, and has retored Joe Gordon to second base in place of Joe Avila. But that may have been merely to take advantage of the Boston fences suited to that pair. Since the Indians were last at Griffith Stadium Luke Easter has emerged as a new power with the club; Rosen has established himself as one of the most dangerous long-ball hitters in the league, Bob Feller has staged a sensational comeback and Bob Lemon forged to the top of the league with 14 wins.

The Nats have done tolerably well themselves lately, with 4 wins in their last five games 7 in their last 11, and have a five-game bulge in fifth place.

Washington speedboat followers will have an eye on the Gold Cup classic to be run on the Detroit River at Detroit, Mich., this weekend for two reasons.

Walker

First, the Gold Cup event compares somewhat to a major league opening day baseball game in which the fans have a look at the year's crop of highly tauted players.

The Gold Cup thriller is the curtain raiser on the 1950 edition of the giant powered bullet-like racing craft. In some instances, the showing is the premier of several years of planning, designing and building.

With the recent history making fete of S. S. Sayres who set an all time high for boat racing speed at 160.3235 m.p.h. in his Slo-Mo-Shun as an indication of what to expect, present records unquestionably will be shattered as the millionaire-owned craft take to the water on the Detroit River.

The second reason for the interest of Washingtonians in the Gold Cup event is that, barring unforeseen incidents, most of the glittering Gold Cuppers will run here in mid-September at the President's Cup Regatta.

Tomorrow this writer will give you some on-the-spot impressions of prerace entries, speeds expected, qualifying owners and some quotes from the daredevil drivers, from the Motor City.

The announcement that Rear Admiral Frank G. Fahrion, superintendent of the Navy Gun Factory, has been assigned as Atlantic Fleet Destroyer commander, causes Washington's boating fraternity to lose one of its most ardent supporters.

It was under Admiral Fahrion's direction that the highly successful marine pageant and regatta was staged last fall as a part of the 150th anniversary of the famed Southeast institution. He has been a prominent figure in every marine activity, including the President's Cup Regatta during his Washington duty.

Washington's miniature Navy—the outboard hydros-take off for the New Jersey outboard championships tomorrow to be staged at Lake Hopatcong on Sunday, Ike Hale, Hudson Moses, Dick Bowers, Jimmy Baden, Dean Worcester and Jackie Lanier will car top their tiny craft to the New Jersey resort for the event.

Jarboe Hurls 3-0, 2-Hitter

George Jarboe pitched a two-hitter to lead Cameo to a 3-0 triumph over Randall Motors in a Washington Post-Industrial League game yesterday on the Ellipse. The win was the fifth against one loss for pace-setting Cameo.

West Virginia Boosts Trout Season 45 Days

By Ralph Murdock

LENGTHENING of the trout season in West Virginia by more than 45 days and disclosure of plans for doubling present trout production for stocking purposes featured the regular quarterly meeting of the conservation commission. By unanimous vote, the commission extended the current season, which originally would have closed on July 15, to midnight of Labor Day, September 4.

Murdock

The commission acted after receiving reports that fishing so far has been poor due to high water and other stream conditions and that few stocked trout survive the winter.

WE ARE JUST about convinced that Sunday is the wrong day to fish the upper Chesapeake Bay—at least for Johnnie Holland, Art Brown and yours truly. We failed dismally. To make matters worse, a party of four anglers from Mount Vernon, Ill., covered the same territory the next day and came back with 78 stripers which weighed from 1 to 1½ pounds. They chummed with Capt. Doyle Kendall of Deale, Md. The successful anglers were Mr. and Mrs. John Hall and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Reynolds.

Here's a new wrinkle in chumming—at least it clicked for Ernest J. Vargo, Fort Foote rd., near Oxon Hill, Md., and Harry Lobdell, host at the Band Box.

Said Vargo: "Live grass shrimp were scarce so we mixed in some frozen grass shrimp which we bought in town. We started our chum line and in a jiffy the rockfish were feeding about 30 feet off the stern of our outboard motor boat. We were fishing in the Patuxent River, less than a half mile above Point Patience."

VARGO CONTINUED: "I was using a Shakesperian fly-rod and a 6-pound test mono-filament line and casting with a streamer fly. Brother, that's real sport." The prescription worked to the tune of 140 rock and 39 nice white perch. Incidentally, the Point Patience area was our "best bet" in last Friday's weekend suggestions.

Weekend Suggestions:

ROCKFISH — Point Patience area is the hot spot. Good catches being made by chumming. Location, mouth of the Patuxent River at Solomons Island.

HARDHEADS — From Sandgates on the Patuxent to Old Cedar Point Lighthouse. Catches fair. Frozen shrimp is the proper bait.

SPOT—Corfield Harbor seems best. Location—Lower Potomac River. Bloodworms For this species.

Redskins Due To Scrimmage

(Special to The Washington Post)

Los Angeles, July 20.—The Washington Redskins, in training for only four days, will hold their first practice scrimmage Saturday.

Coach Herman Ball expressed dissatisfaction at the way the team looked in today's workout as the players began to flub assignments.

Ball said, "They'd better know them when we scrimmage Saturday or somebody will get killed, and I don't mean by me. Two 240-pounders colliding unexpectedly can do a lot of damage."

Ball instituted a news letter to the players during the off-season and in one of them discussed care of the feet in an attempt to eliminate training-camp blisters. It has paid off. Nobody has had a blister yet.

Ball expressed delight with a couple of Hoosier hot-shots, Quarterback Nick Sebek and Guard Casimir Witucki. Witucki is a 233-pounder while Sebek was selected on Notre Dame's all-opponents team.

'The Best Laid Plans of Mice and Men'

When big news is breaking reporters often go to great lengths to save seconds. Sometimes they succeed.

The other day, the Pentagon summoned reporters for an important announcement. (It turned out to be the story of the draft.)

The United Press was represented by Dean Dittmer and Paul Southwick. "I'll stand in the back of the room, nearest the door," Paul whispered. "I'll try for the pay phone outside Johnson's office."

Dittmer nodded. The doors were locked, mimeographed announcements distributed, and the reporters given a chance to digest them. When everybody was ready, the doors were unlocked and the press erupted from the room.

Southwick was first out, and sprinted for the pay phone. Dropping his nickel in the slot, he dialed furiously—with no result. He hung up, then tried again. Then he tried with a different nickel. And then (my heart breaks to say it) he realized that the phone was out of order.

The UP didn't lose anything by Paul's bad luck, because Dean got to the press room as quickly as any of the other reporters. But it hurts, anyhow.

ADD DEFINITIONS

Dr. Ross North Berkes, guest professor from California teaching this summer at George Washington University, was discussing "leadership" the other day.

He told his class that in a flight of ducks, the lead duck sometimes goes flying off in the wrong direction. But when he notices that the flock has continued on the right course in spite of his dereliction, the leader comes back to his proper place. Summed up Dr. Berkes:

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

New Charges of Salary Kickbacks

By Drew Pearson

Down in Oklahoma they aren't letting the Korean war make them forget about the importance of clean politics. Not only have they got wise to the speculations of Senator Thomas, but the only Oklahoma Congressman who failed of reelection on July 4 was Victor Wickersham of Mangum, who enjoyed some peculiar arrangements with his employes which had all the earmarks of the same salary kickbacks that landed Congressman Parnell Thomas in jail.

Wickersham

As a result of these salary arrangements, Oklahoma voters got suspicious of Congressman Wickersham, and the seven opponents running against him got more votes than he did. Now he faces a runoff.

The FBI has been investigating Wickersham, who, incidentally, happens to be a Democrat, while Parnell Thomas is a Republican. I have also been probing Wickersham, and can report that one of the young men hired by the Congressman under peculiar circumstances has now received a payoff.

He is Lloyd Matthews, who worked in the Congressman's real estate office in Washington, though his salary was paid by the American people to handle congressional matters.

'Keep My Mouth Shut'

On the same day I first exposed Wickersham's payroll padding—December 12, 1949—young Matthews wrote a letter to his friend Aubrey Witt, another member of Wickersham's staff, in which he said:

"Mr. Wickersham finally reached me tonight after several efforts and undying persistence. He told me," continued Matthews, "to do exactly what I had planned to do anyway, keep my mouth shut. Amazing how a man's magnanimity increases in direct proportion to the duress under which he is subjected. He, out of the clear blue sky, asked me how I would like to help with the census . . . his remark was plainly forced, but he said it . . . adding whipped cream to the dessert, he continued: 'How would you like to go to West Point?'"

Down in Oklahoma, the Congressman has been answering salary kickback exposures with the routine answer given by most Washington bigwigs when caught in a tight corner—namely, "Pearson is a liar."

However, if the facts I reported had not been correct, the Congressman could have taken me to the legal cleaners; instead of which he hastened to give the man he wanted to keep quiet a West Point pay-off. Wickersham gave Matthews the earliest possible appointment to West Point, and he entered this year's batch of plebes, July 5, 1950.

It appears that Matthews kept his part of the bargain "to keep my mouth shut." He denied to the FBI that he paid any kickbacks to Wickersham, though Aubrey Witt told the FBI otherwise.

Furthermore, the salary arrangement Matthews had with the Congressman looked most peculiar. Matthews was just out of high school when on June 1, 1949, the Congressman offered him a job at $200 a month. Instead of paying him $200, however, Matthews' salary check was for $460 a month.

But, believe it or not, this wasn't all. Here are two entirely new salary arrangements the Congressman had, definitely involving kickbacks.

In March and April of last year, he put two young constituents, Steve Fisher and Phil Symcox of Cordell, Okla., on the Federal payroll. However, they didn't report for work until two months later—June and July, 1949. Meanwhile, the Congressman had held their March and April paychecks for $250 each, which he paid them after they started work.

Excuse For Kickbacks

He explained, however, that they were supposed to work for $165 a month so that the checks really covered a six-week period. This, of course, was not true, but Wickersham used it as an excuse to demand kickbacks from both boys.

For after they finished two months work and decided to go home, Wickersham explained that they had not put in a full six-week period for each $250 check and demanded a kickback of $127 from each.

This was paid directly to him, whereas their original salary checks were paid them by the United States Treasury. Thus the Congressman was in a position to pocket the $254 or $127 from each.

Fisher and Symcox, when reached by telephone, verified the above facts. They also said that immediately after this column first exposed Wickersham's payroll peculiarities last December, they received mysterious receipts for the $127 each which, on the reverse side, stated that the money had been spent for addressing envelopes.

The great majority of Congressmen, in the opinion of this observer, do not indulge in payroll irregularities. However, one or two rotten apples in Oklahoma and Georgia can spoil a whole barrel.

Two Garssons Denied Parole From U. S. Prison

Henry M. and Murray W. Garsson have been denied parole from prison, it was disclosed yesterday.

The brothers, who were convicted of bribing former Representative Andrew J. May (D., Ky.) to obtain war contracts for their munitions combine, would have become eligible for parole July 31. They have served eight months of their eight-months-to-two-year sentences in Federal Prison at Danbury, Conn.

May, who is serving an identical sentence at the Federal institution at Ashland, Ky., will become eligible for parole August 4.

Dr. George W. Killinger of the Federal Parole Board said the decision the Garssons was based in part on the fact they have another indictment pending against them. It charges conspiracy to violate the War Contract Renegotiation Act.

WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, JULY 21, 1950

The Federal Diary by Jerry Kluttz

Senate Group Approves Security Risk Firings In 'Sensitive' Agencies

The Senate Armed Services Committee yesterday approved with several changes the bill to give the heads of sensitive Federal agencies the power to fire employes they believe to be poor security risks. The measure passed the House 10 days ago.

A provision to give the President the authority, when he desires it, to extend the summary firing authority to other agency chiefs was retained in the bill. However, the committee, by a tie vote, rejected a proposal by Senator Hunt (D., Wyo.) to apply the bill flatly to all Federal agencies.

These changes were made in the House-approved versions: (1) The Senate committee struck out the House provision to permit status employes who were fired to be given jobs in other agencies if they are cleared by Civil Service; (2) to require the President to report to Congress in writing when he extends the bill to other agencies, and (3) to have agencies give charges in writing to employes when they are summarily suspended in order to speed up disposition of the cases.

Senator Morse (R., Oreg.) lost his fight to give accused employes the right of appeal to the Civil Service Commission. The Civil Service, Morse explained, could clear the records of those employes who were unjustly fired and they would be given an opportunity for jobs in other agencies if their own agencies failed to take them back. He contended that the bill gave agency heads police state powers.

Specified agencies that would get the broad firing authority under the bill are State, Commerce, Justice and the Defense Departments, Atomic Energy, Coast Guard, National Security Resources Board and the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

Most of the agencies have had even greater authority over their employes. For example, Felix Larkin, general counsel of the Defense Department, explained that Army, Navy and Air Force had fired only 375 employes since 1940 under a similar law. The record also shows, he said, that 141 others were cleared; 106 were transferred or allowed to resign, and 216 cases are now pending.

If the bill is approved, Larkin said, the Defense agencies will use it to get rid of unsuitable employes. It won't be used, he said, to fire employes on loyalty grounds.

DECENTRALIZATION: The Federal Power Commission is one Federal agency that's definitely looking for a new home, and it has its eye on the resort city of Colorado Springs.

Chairman Mon Wallgren said yesterday the commission would like to go to Colorado Springs if and when Federal agencies are moved out of this city to make room for expanding war agencies.

A further decentralization of Federal agencies is considered probable in event of full wartime mobilization. In the early days of World War II, a score of agencies with about 30,000 employes were moved out.

A top Federal official conceded yesterday that a new decentralization move was being studied. But for the time being, at least, he said the emphasis would be in this direction:

To discourage the wholesale expansion of agencies here, such as that which took place during World War II;

To set up new war agencies, if they become necessary, outside of this city.

The official explained that the Administration, for example, was opposed to the construction of a new building here for the 5500 Social Security employes now in Baltimore. He also said there was no good reason why the counterparts of World War II agencies such as Censorship, War Production, War Manpower, and the like should be located here.

Nevertheless, transfer rumors are spreading through a score or more agencies here. Employes are most jittery in agencies that were moved out and returned here after the war—agencies such as SEC, Immigration and Natualization, Employes Compensation, etc.

The District Gets Its Liberty Bell

The Washington Post

Federal Land Suggested to Help Parking

Keneipp Predicts 200,000 Cars Will Be Registered in 1951

Partial help to combat the District's ever-increasing parking problem was offered to the House District Committee yesterday by Irving C. Root, superintendent of the National Park Service.

Root said he believed the Federal Government had some land which could be used for parking. He agreed to confer with District officials and Federal officials from agencies controlling the land in an attempt to expand parking facilities.

The extent of the city's parking problem was outlined by George Keneipp, director of vehicles and traffic, who told the subcommittee there were 50,000 more vehicles here as of July 7 than during the war years.

200,000 Registrations

He said that an expected 200,000 would be registered next March. One half of these he said, are on the streets each weekday, and are parked on the streets at night. Keneipp disclosed there are 3100 parking meters which yield a $300,000 annual revenue.

Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), proposed the entire square between 12th and 13th sts., and Pennsylvania and E sts., including the Washington garage, be turned into one large parking lot. Most of the area already is used for parking.

Washington I. Cleveland submitted a report from the American Automobile Association, suggesting that in the central business district alone there is parking room for 600 additional cars if the space between the building line and the sidewalk is used. He said this space is not used now because of a ruling by the corporation counsel.

With Parking Above

The AAA also urged the District Commissioners to give prompt approval to a project to turn Western Market at 21st and K sts., nw., into a market with parking facilities above it. The association also backed a project to turn the Grand Plaza on 14th st., nw., south of the District Building into a beautiful parking area with underground garages.

Other witnesses included Ernest R. Brett of the Keystone Automobile Association, Charles Upham, chairman of the Motor Vehicle Parking Agency; E. D. Merrill, president of the Capital Transit Co., and Harry Wender, attorney for the Arrow Parking Corp.

Liberty Bell Is D. C.'s Bond Drive Reward

Washington went "measurably" over the top in the recent Independence Savings Bond drive, District Division Chairman E. C. Baltz said yesterday in presenting a reproduction of the Liberty Bell to the District of Columbia.

Exact figures are not yet available Baltz said, but it is known that the Capital exceeded its 7½-million-dollar quota. The 2000-pound copper bell, a duplicate of which was presented to each State and Territory, was used to stimulate bond sales in the drive that ended July 4.

Baltz spoke at noontime ceremonies in front of the District Building attended by Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder, District officials and a handful of curious passersby.

Commissioner John Russell Young accepted the bell for the city and said it would be placed in a central location and rung on "appropriate occasions."

It is believed the bell eventually will be set up on the triangle in front of the District Building, which the D. C. Veterans Service Center now occupies. Charles Stofberg, in charge of arrangements for yesterday's ceremony, said the bell will remain on the front steps of the District Building until a final location has been determined.

The program ended with the three District Commissioners ringing the bell as Marian Kiatta sang the closing phrase of "America"—". . . let freedom ring."

There very nearly wasn't any singing. Miss Kiatta, at Loew's Capitol Theater, missed an earlier scheduled number because her piano didn't arrive. The gold-colored portable piano, towed on rollers by a police motorcycle, made its appearance in the middle of Baltz's speech.

Men of St. John's Play Host to 300 Kids at Carnival

Three hundred orphans and underprivileged youngsters discovered Santa Claus can come in July yesterday as they stuffed with ice cream, cake, candy, apples and other gastronomical mistakes at a party given by the Men of St. John's at their annual carnival now in progress at 27th st. and Military rd. nw.

The kids didn't miss a trick—refreshments, the ferris wheel, merry-go-round and other gravity-defying machines, and balloons too.

The carnival runs through July 29. Poceeds will be donated to the St. John's College stadium fund.

Runaway Car Smashes Hole In House Wall

Rider Misses Brake, Hits Accelerator Of Driverless Auto

A runaway automobile backed into the front of a Green Meadows home yesterday afternoon, smashing a gaping hole in the wall and slightly injuring one man.

The injured man is William F. Harper, jr., 60, of 2012 Rittenhouse st., Green Meadows, the car's owner. He was treated for cuts at Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale.

The entire wall of one room of the one-story dwelling at 2015 Rittenhouse st. was pushed in by the impact. The owner, R. E. Turner, a retired Metropolitan policeman, was sitting in the room.

Harper's wife, who was on the back seat of the car, said the accident occurred this way:

Harper, backing out of his driveway, noticed a child in the street. Alighting to lead the child away, he left the motor in gear and the car continued to move.

Harper's 83-year-old father, William F. Harper, sitting in the front seat, tried to step on the brake, but hit the accelerator instead. The car sped across the street and slammed into the Turner house.

Harper was injured when the door slammed on him as he tried to jump back into the car, his wife said. No one else was hurt.

Hospital Gets 'Inaugural' Check Today

A $5000 check is to be presented to Children's Hospital today to finance complete renovation of a major operating room.

The check, last of the proceeds of the 1949 Presidential inauguration, will be presented by Melvin D. Hildreth, inaugural committee chairman, to Dr. Montgomery Blair, chairman of the hospital board.

The project was selected by Mrs. Harry Truman at the request of the inaugural committee.

Hospital officials said the equipment to be replaced is completely outmoded. Some of it, they said, goes back as far as 1902.

Government Study Group Hit in Fairfax

Commission Called 'Loaded' With Unit Opposing Changes In County's Rule

A special commission to consider changes in the Fairfax County government is "loaded" with members who oppose any change in the present "inefficient . . . and undemocratic" county government, the Fairfax Federation of Citizens Association charged last night.

The citizens group, which represents 33 organizations, administered this tongue lashing in a letter to Columnist David Lawrence, who is executive committee chairman of the 21-member special commission.

Only 15 members were present at the Federation meeting in the Annandale School last night, apparently because of the heavy rainfall which bogged down county roads and kept people at home.

The commission's executive committee had sent the Federation and other county organizations a 55-point questionnaire, asking their detailed views on different governmental forms for a Fairfax County.

Answer Only Two

Only two of these questions were answered by the Federation last night. Asked if it approved action of the Board of Supervisors in appropriating $5000 to defray expenses of the special commission, the Federation replied:

"The supervisors are using the citizens' money to pay for an underhanded attack on a citizen movement" . . . specifically, the Federation pointed out, that movement for a county manager form of government for Fairfax.

[The present form of government is known as the supervisor form. There is no county manager but a referendum on obtaining that type of government probably will be held in November.]

The federation continued: "The supervisors created your commission and stacked it with avowed opponents of the county manager proposal in a last desperate effort to prejudice the referendum."

The commission's own chairman, the federation letter continued, Walter C. Crain, while acting as chairman of one of the commission's hearings on governmental change," clearly stated his opposition to the county manager proposals."

Questions "Irrelevant"

In their answer to the questionnaire, federation members wrote that many of the 55 questions "are entirely irrelevant to the issue that is to be put before the voters of Fairfax County in referendum."

The federation accused the commission of trying to "confuse" the voters as to the real issue . . . adoption of a county manager form of government.

Also the letter charged, "the ridiculously short time" allowed to return the questionnaire—the deadline is July 24—"raises the suspicion that you are anxious to avoid the presentation of any careful and effective case for the county manager."

House Kills FDIC Plan For Building

The House yesterday defeated, 227 to 90, an amendment to the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, authorizing FDIC to construct a 15-million-dollar building in Washington.

The amendment had been sponsored in the Senate. The measure now goes back to the Senate which can agree to the House change or send the bill to conference

The measure grants full FDIC coverage to about 98 percent of all bank depostiors. At present about 95 percent of the Nation's 104 million depositors are covered. The House voted to double the maximum bank deposit that can be guaranteed by FDIC.

Blacksburg, Va., July 20 (AP).—Gov. John S. Battle came here for inauguration of the two governors at Boys' and Girls' State today, found Blacksburg unseasonally hot, delivered two brief addresses, and was swarmed over by the 296 Girls' State itizens, all wanting autographs.

District Heads Act to Avert War Scarcities

Purchasing Officer, Engineering Officials Told to Study Needs

The District Commissioners took two steps yesterday in line with President Truman's request that Government agencies cut down on items needed for the defense program.

First, after a morning conference with key department heads, the Commissioners directed Purchasing Officer Roland M. Brennan to obtain from the Government a priority list of items considered "critical."

Second, Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young said he had asked his department heads to give him reports on amounts of metals, metal products and electrical equipment needed for pending construction projects.

General Young said the District has not received any instructions from the Federal Government on curtailment of activities. Yesterday's actions were taken in anticipation of a Federal directive such as foreshadowed by the President in his message to Congress Wednesday, Young said.

The President then said he was directing all executive agencies to review their programs "for the purpose of modifying them wherever practicable" to lessen the demand on goods and services needed for the defense program.

Until specific instructions are received, all District construction and maintenance work will continue as scheduled, Young said. "As yet there is no thought of restricting anything," he stated.

Young said he asked for information on construction projects only. Similar data will be sought on maintenance and operation needs after Brennan has obtained a specific list of critical items.

Young said he had also instructed Assistant Engineer Commissioner Thomas J. Hayes 3d to give a separate estimate of materials that may be needed for the city's civil-defense program.

Hyde Announces As GOP Candidate For State Senate

DeWitt S. Hyde, now a member of the Montgomery County deelgation to the Maryland House of Delegates yesterday announced he would be a candidate for the Republican nomination as State Senator from Montgomery County.

Hyde, a resident of Bethesda, will face Joseph B. Simpson, jr., of Takoma Park, the only Democratic candidate to file for the nomination to date. The incumbent, State Senator Roy Tasco Davis, is seeking the Republican nomination for Governor.

Meanwhile, William A. Marlowe of Rockville, who had filed for the Democratic nomination for register of wills, yesterday withdrew his nomination.

Action Pending

World War II Tomb Plan Up to Senate

The tomb and nature of ceremonies attending the burial of the Unknown Soldier of World War II in Arlington Cemetery next Memorial Day rests with the Senate, it appeared last night.

The omnibus appropriation bill, now on the Senate floor, carries no funds for the long-planned tribute to the Second World War dead. The Department of Defense had asked one million dollars for a new tomb and fitting ceremonies. The House slashed the request to $350,000.

But on July 6, the Senate Appropriations Committee voted "without prejudice" to delete the entombment money, giving this explanation:

"In recommending the temporary postponement of the erection of this tomb, the committee wishes to point out that the plans for the proposed memorial should be restudied and that a joint committee of the two appropriations committees ought to be appointed to work out with the proper officials of the executive branch the plans for this memorial and the related ceremonies."

The Senate committee further stated the proposed tomb should "fit in properly with the already existing tomb of the Unknown Soldier of World War I" and that the attending ceremonies should be "more modest" than those planned.

Apparently mindful of this congressional sentiment, the Defense Department—three weeks before the Senate Committee acted—publicly announced a more "modest" plan.

There would be no new tomb to mark the resting place of the Unknown Soldier of the second war, the Defense Department announced on June 17.

The body of the World War II Unknown would be placed in a black-lined vault immediately under the body of the World War I Unknown said a department spokesman, and the sarcophagus which now marks the present Arlington Cemetery tomb will serve to designate also the new grave.

Officers of the Quartermaster Corps' Memorial Division said they were "puzzled" over the apparent misunderstanding in the Senate Appropriations Committee, adding that planning for the World War II vault construction is at a standstill pending final congressional action.

A key Appropriations Committee member last night explained:

"Of course no one is opposed to the idea. We simply felt the Defense Department does not need even as much money as the House granted. I'm sure sufficient money will be restored when we go to conference with the House."

Original plans call for enlarging the granite plaza around the tomb and some landscaping.

The unknown serviceman of the recent world war will be selected from among six unidentified bodies brought home from the six theaters of war.

Services Call Increase in Bus Fares a 'Hindrance'

ICC Told Civilians May Be Discouraged From Taking Jobs At Va. Facilities

Higher bus fares to the Pentagon and other military installations in nearby Virginia would hinder recruiting of civilian workers by the armed services, the Interstate Commerce Commission was told yesterday.

Because of the "international situation," the Army plans to hire about 2000 new employes, the Air Force about 200, while the Navy plans to increase its civilian personnel by about 10 percent, the ICC was told.

The witness, Charles F. Mullaly, assistant to the director of personnel, Department of the Army, said he represented all military branches employing civilians at the Pentagon, Navy Annex, National Airport and Arlington Farms installations.

Marines to Add 600

The Marine Corps plans to increase its civilian force at the Navy Annex by 600 employes, he said.

Mullaly was testifying at a hearing before ICC Examiner H. C. Lawton on requests for higher fares to the Virginia installations by the A.B.&W. Transit Co. and the W.V.&M. Coach Co. (Arnold Lines).

Also asked by the two bus lines, and by Captal Transit as well, was the abolition of the joint ticket, now costing 16 cents, which provides transfer privileges for persons riding to and from the military installations via Capital Transit and either of the Virginia carriers.

The requests were taken under advisement by Examiner Lawton at the conclusion of the hearing yesterday. Hearings began Monday.

Grades Affected

Recruiting of employes in grades GS-4 and below would be particularly affected by the proposed bus fare increase from 10 to 15 cents on the Virginia lines, and abolition of the joint fare, according to Mullaly.

About 52 percent of the workers in the military installations are in those grades, he said. Average pay of employes in these grades is about $2650, he said.

Asked about housing plans for the new employes planned by the military, Mullaly said it was planned to provide temporary housing in the District for recruit workers. Personnel officials have fought a losing battle for retention of Arlington Farms dormitories, he said, as the Public Buildings Service has used them for other purposes.

Heidenheimer Will Filed; Estate Put at $500,000

The will, filed in District Court, provides for gifts totaling $10,000 to 12 organizations, including $1000 to the Community Chest, $2000 to the Washington Hebrew Congregation, and $1000 to Children's Hospital. Twenty friends and minor relatives will divide $120,000.

The remainder of the estate will go in equal shares to Edwin D. Heid, 4705 29th pl. nw., and Howard S. Heid, nephews, 5832 Georgia ave., nw., and Frances H. Levinson, a niece, of Chicago.

Heidenheimer was president of E. Heidenheimer, Inc., 1215 H st., nw.

Braille Catalogue Issued

The Library of Congress yesterday announced publication of a 163-page "Catalogue of Press Braille Books," listing more than 3000 titles. Under a 1931 Act of Congress the library loans books in Braille to adult blind readers requesting them through 26 regional distributing libraries.

Hot-Weather Burglar in Shorts Routed by Woman's Screams

Compton

About 35 minutes later a man police believe was the same prowler broke into a home 11 blocks away. But this time he was more fully attired—white T-shirt and light trousers.

The first housebreaking was at the home of Mrs. Sophie Boultsiden, 43, of 810 Crittenden st. nw. Mrs. Boultsiden, sleeping in a first floor bedroom, awakened to see a man wearing nothing but shorts standing by her bed.

The man put a finger to his lips to caution her to be silent. Mrs. Boultsiden had other ideas. She screamed—but loud.

Her screams aroused her son, George, 21, a student at the University of Maryland, but the prowler got away through a basement door he had forced open to gain entrance. Nothing was stolen.

Just 35 minutes later, Mrs. Lila Chippas, 40, of 3814 13th st. nw., was awakened by a man who was kneeling beside her bed and clutching at her nightclothes. Mrs. Chippas screamed, and the man fled through an unlocked front door. This time $85 in cash was missing from the top of the dresser.

Police said in both cases the prowler was described as a white youth of about 20, 5 feet 11 and 150 pounds, slender build.

Police also flushed a housebreaking suspect from the top of the Raleigh Haberdashery, 1310 F st. nw., at 3:30 a. m. for the second time in less than two weeks.

Police Swear In 6 Promoted Officers

Three new captains and three new lieutenants were sworn in at police headquarters yesterday to climax the speediest series of promotions in the department's history.

Recommendations for the promotions went from the department to the District Commissioners at 10 a. m. and were approved within an hour. The men were sworn in at 2 p. m.

The new captains, as forecast yesterday in The Washington Post, are Edgar E. Scott, head of the robbery squad; Harry Blackman, head of the missing persons bureau, and Aubrey Tolson, head of the general assignment squad.

Have Been Acting Lieutenants

The new lieutenants are H. H. Carper, head of the narcotics squad; David A. Higgins, head of the check squad, and Hoyle D. Secrest, administrative assistant to the chief of detectives.

The District's 1951 budget, which became law Wednesday, provides that captains head four detective squads—homicide, general assignment, missing persons and robbery—and that lieutenants head the auto, check and narcotics squads. It also grants lieutenant's rank to the administrative assistant to the chief of detectives.

Two of the ranks had already been granted, to Capt. Jeremiah Flaherty, homicide squad chief, and to Lieut. Jacob J. Wolf, head of the auto squad. Until now, the extra salary drawn by Flaherty and Wolf was taken from a special police fund.

Wolf, 52, was a civilian patrol driver for the force in 1919. A year later, he went into uniform after Congress decided to make policemen of the drivers. Made a lieutenant on April 18, Wolf has 16 commendations on his record and is considered one of the righthand men of Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police.

Holds 12 Commendations

Higgins is 46 and was appointed to the force in 1932. His 12 commendations include one in 1936 for catching a safecracker and another in 1940 for clearing up 25 housebreakings. He was made a detective sergeant in 1941 and has headed the check squad since 1945.

Carper, 49, has accumulated 17 commendations since his appointment as a police rookie in March, 1925. He was promoted to detective sergeant in 1939 and named acting lieutenant and head of the narcotics squad in 1947.

Secrest has been a fixture at police headquarters for about 25 years. He joined the force in 1925 and after pounding a beat in the Fifth Precinct for three months was transferred to headquarters as a clerk. Within a short time he became aide to the chief of detectives and has remained in that post. He is 50.

Recreation Board

Appointment Of E. J. Kelly Ruled Legal

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West ruled yesterday that Edward J. Kelley's appointment as the Interior Department's representative on the District Recreation Board is now legal.

West's opinion was based on a reorganization act, effective May 24, which authorized the Secretary of the Interior to assign department duties as he saw fit. Kelly was appointed April 12. Whether his appointment was legal then, West did not say.

Until April 12 the department's representative on the board was Irving C. Root, superintendent of National Capital Parks. At that time he was replaced by Kelly, assistant superintendent of NCP. This action was said to have been caused by Root's reputed misgivings about the Interior Department's decision to open its swimming pools on a nonsegregated basis.

Recreation Board Chairman Harry S. Wender asked for a legal ruling on the action, pointing out that the act creating the board stipulated that Interior's representative be the superintendent of NCP.

West said he felt the reorganization act supersedes the act creating the board. And since Secretary of Interior Oscar Chapman had informed the Commissioners, after May 24, that Kelly would be the department's member, West said he felt there was no longer "any question to be answered."

Trade Schools Put in Clear By City Heads

The city heads accepted "as the views of a part of the committee" a report signed by 7 of the 18 members that cleared the schools of alleged exploitation of veterans studying under GI Bill of Rights.

They announced they would welcome and make public reports from other members of the committee. But "in the absence of some postive showing" that the Board of Education was not properly carrying out its job of approving and supervising the schools, the Commissioners said they felt no further action by them was in order.

Their decision was contained in a statement released by Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young.

The committee was created a year ago to investigate reports that 30 or more of these schools were failing to give adequate training and were turning out many more graduates than the labor market could absorb.

At a meeting with the Commissioners Tuesday, several committee members who had not signed the report complained that they had not seen it until after it reached the Commissioners. They branded the action as "high-handed" and said they did not feel an adequate investigation had been made.

ICC's Patterson Enjoys 'Squatter Rights' Though U. S. Retired Him at 70 in June

By Harman W. Nichols
United Press Reporter

Sitting alone without pay and unhappy in his fancy office at the Interstate Commerce Commission is elder Commissioner William J. Patterson.

Bill Patterson, an affable and able chap with a graying pompadour, was 70 early in June. The law says a man must retire from Government service at the end of the month when he reaches 70.

"I'm not ready to retire," he said. "I'm still full of the old stuff."

Old Bill has refused to turn his desk over to anybody else. As a matter of fact, there has been no challenge so far, since no new appointment has been made.

The retirement section of the Civil Service Commission says that so far as it is concerned, Patterson is a former commissioner as of the end of June.

Points to Law

He claims "squatter" rights on his office space via the language of the law, which says:

"Upon expiration of his term of office a commissioner shall continue to serve until his successor is appointed and shall have qualified."

"I am no lawyer," the commissioner said, "but that reads straight to me."

Patterson has been with the commission since 1914. He became a commissioner in 1939 and served as chairman in 1944.

In 1880 he took his first job as a railroad call boy at 16, after he was graduated from high school. He railroaded his way up from there—brakeman, fireman, switchman and conductor—before he coupled on with the ICC.

Commissioners get paid at the end of the month. As a commissioner, Patterson draws $15,000 a year. He wonders what will happen come payday.

"I haven't much to hope for," he told me. "Maybe I'll wind up as a half-dollar-a-year man."

The White House, which could sign an order extending the retired commissioner's tour of duty, is busy with other matters. The retirement section of the Civil Service Commission said that so far as it is concerned, Patterson is "a former commissioner as of the end of June."

Lions Elect Vienna Man As Director

Chicago, July 20 (AP).—Lions—30,000 of them from 28 countries—roared a sentimental "Auld Lang Syne" today and headed home from their thirty-third annual international convention.

A 35-year-old Texas attorney, Herbert C. Petry, jr., of Carrizo Springs, was named to head the world's largest men's service organization, Lions International, for the coming year.

He and the other two top officers were raised a step from their previous offices, without opposition. The only contest was for the third vice president, won by S. A. Dodge of Detroit. He defeated A. Blee Dredge of Springfield, Ohio.

The new first vice president is Harold P. Nuter of Camden, N. J., and second vice president, Edgar M. Elbert of Maywood, a Chicago suburb.

Eight new United States directors on the Lions' international board are George A. Doll of Fort Morgan, Colo.; Curtis D. Lovil, Gardiner, Me.; Edward J. Korbell, New York City; James C. Hill, Vienna, Va.; Edward G. Barry, Arkadelphia, Ark.; Clifford I. Thoma, Fairfield, Iowa; Elmer E. Stewart, Shreveport, La., and H. Ray Welter, Great Falls, Mont.

Nurserymen Give Medal to Harvard Man

Dr. Donald Wyman, horticulturist of the Arnold Aboretum, Harvard University, was honored by the American Association of Nurserymen at the Hotel Statler last night.

Dr. Wyman

Earlier, Wayne Ferris, of Hampton, Iowa, was elected president of the association, and John Wight of Cairo, Ga., vice president-treasurer. Dr. Richard P. Wright was reelected executive secretary of the organization, which has its headquarters here.

Wyman, praised for his contributions to horticulture through research, was presented with the first Norman J. Colman Award—a plaque and $100 honorarium—at the dinner program of the association, holdings its "diamond jubilee" convention at the hotel this week.

Dr. William H. Martin, dean and director of the New Jersey College of Agriculture, made the presentation. The award is named for the first United States Secretary of Agriculture.

Adventists Against Naming New Envoy to the Vatican

San Francisco, July 20 (AP).—President Truman was urged by the World Conference of Seventh-Day Adventists today not to appoint a representative to the Vatican.

A resolution, approved unanimously by the conference, suggested that telegrams be sent to the President urging him against appointing a successor to Myron C. Taylor.

That was the view of Dr. Jean Nussbaum of Paris, speaking to the Forty-sixth World Conference of the Adventists.

Churches in Yugoslavia are open, he asserted, and "as long as the church leaders stick to the Gospel and forget politics, they will not be persecuted."

He said he believes political leaders feel religion gives the people a hope for the future and tends to bring about contentment among the masses.

Nussbaum said he examined a number of cases in Yugoslavia where religious leaders were punished.

"In each instance the news came to me as an act of religious persecution. However, my investigations revealed that it was a case of mixing politics and religion," he said.

Church positions announced today included:

R. R. Bietz, South Lancaster, Mass., becomes president of Southern California Conference, Los Angeles, replacing C. L. Torrey who goes to Washington, D. C., as world treasurer of SDA; William J. Harris, Berkeley, Northern California Conference Sabbath School secretary, becomes associate Sabbath School secretary of the General Conference, Washington, D. C.; Elmer Walde, Glendale, associate speaker on the church's international radio broadcast, goes to Washington as associate secretary of the radio department.

Legionnaires Hear Sparkman Praise U. N. Action on Korea

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

Senator John Sparkman last night told District American Legionnaires that the unhesitating action of the United Nations in opposing the Korean invasion was "one of the bright spots" of the situation.

Sparkman (D., Ala.) spoke at the opening session of the District of Columbia Department's three-day, thirty-second annual convention in the Hotel Shoreham.

The Senator, who described the invasion of South Korea as the opening military phase of a scheming totalitarian power's mad drive for world conquest, said that "the importance of the united spirit of the 52 cooperating nations of the U. N. cannot be overestimated.

"If we — and we must — get through the Korean ordeal successfuplly, the U. N. may have very well set on a course that will insure peace for years to come."

Troops Needed In Europe

If the U. N. had hesitated, Sparkman said, it surely would have meant the death of the international organization.

Referring to criticism of continental nations for not giving more military aid to the Americans in Korea, he said, "the millions of mobilized troops in Russia make it imperative that Britain and France not further denude themselves in Europe."

Sparkman described the "generally bipartisan support of our Korean efforts" as "gratifying." He said the President's newly announced program is "the Nation's program, and, while everyone may not be in complete accord with every part of it, it does represent the minimum we should undertake at this time."

Secretary of the Interior Oscar Chapman headed the list of those who received Legion certificates of recognition for 'outstanding and unselfish service in behalf of the Legion."

Lauds Legion's Work

In a brief speech of acceptance, the Secretary said, "there is no question but what the international Communist crowd is on the march." The Legion, he said, "is helping in not allowing the country to become disunited."

Others honored were: Drew Pearson, national newspaper columnist and radio commentator, whose column appears in The Washington Post; John Riseling, night city editor of The Washington Post; B. M. McKelway, editor of The Washington Star; Frank C. Waldrop, executive editor of the Washington Times-Herald; Mark Evans, WTOP announcer; Arthur Bowis, of Chevy Chase Motor Co.; Arthur Clarendon Smith, civic leader; Arthur Mayo, district manager of the Soap Box Derby; Boise L. Bristor, chief statistician, District public schools; and George E. Keneipp, District traffic director.

Schuettler Honored

Also honored was Charles Schuettler, of George Washington Post No. 1, who received the Watson B. Miller Award, a plaque given annually to the outstanding District Legionnaire of the year. Scheuttler received the award in recognition of his work as a member of the department's ways and means committee.

Twelve members of the National Guard of Honor received medals of merit in recognition of their work in the honor guard.

A memorial service for departed comrades, led by the Fort Stevens Post No. 23 ritual team, introduction of sons of legionnaires, and seating of delegates were among other features of the session, attended by approximately 700 persons.

Walter Winchell —In New York

These Charming People

Henry (Mr. Roberts) Fonda was telling a reporter how glad he was that he moved from his rural home in Movietown to N. Y. "Why," he why'd, "we live 10 miles from the nearest neighbor. It was quiet and my kids were awful lonely. But New York's different! It is a city with lots of people. It even smells noisy. I'd never move back to the Coast."

"Where do you live in New York?" he was asked.

"Oh," said Henry, "we have a lovely place in Connecticut!"

One of Ted Healy's stooges (Mousie Garner) is amused at the feuds among comics over pilfering of gags, etc. He recalled when Milton Berle and Joe Penner clashed about who first used the comedy hat with the brim turned up against the crown.

"You're both all wet," squelched Ted. "Napolean started that!"

Nearly all of these stories are familiar to show folks. They either read them here in the last 25 years or in the various digests, which know a good story when they see one, too . . . Peter Lind Hayes' pet stars, the late Eddy Foy who was breaking in a new ingenue . . . When the last curtain fell after several bows, she apologized to Mr. Foy: "Oh, I'm so sorry. I didn't mean to keep taking center that way. I know the center of the stage is reserved for the star."

"Don't let it worry you, my dear girl," said Foy, putting on his best clown-ham manners, "I always take the center with me!"

Helen Hayes discusses her husband, Charles MacArthur, with great affection when interviewed . . . She once revealed the sequel to his renowned: "I wish these were emeralds!" which he cooed when they first met, as he offered a bag of peanuts . . . During the last war he picked up some emeralds in the China-Burma-India sector and had them made into a clip for her . . . If one of his pals saw Helen wearing them, he'd say: "I wish they were peanuts."

MacArthur always sends her something on opening nights. When she opened in "Candle in the Wind," an anti-Nazi play, he wired: "I hate you, I hate you, I hate you! (signed) A. Hitler."

Once, in Hollywood, the late critic, Alexander Wollcott, was having a small, select dinner . . . MacArthur, one of his intimates, dropped in and was informed he was not invited and to please leave . . . Alec should have known better, says Helen . . . The dinner was being held in a hotel, so Charlie got into a waiter's uniform and when Alec asked for some water, MacArthur poured a pitcher of it over his head, saying: "Is this what you wanted, sir?"

Critic George Jean Nathan puts on a good show. When a woman sued his friend, Eugene O'Neill (for alleged infringement), her lawyer tried to rattle George out of the witness chair.

"How many first-rate critics are there?" he asked.

"About 20," said George.

"Indeed?" was the caustic comment. "I always thought there was only one!"

"A lot of people seem to think so," Nathan intoned stiffily, as he brushed his sleeve in The Elegant Manner.

"This business of criticism," says an editorial, "is unfairly one-sided, due largely to the prideful, martyr-complexes of authors, actors and producers. Sometime early this century the practice of talking back to critics went out of fashion. The stage folk thought it the better part of dignity to eat their own smoke. They agreed to suffer in silence, for, after all, what does a critic know about art? And, after all, what does he know?"

What he likes.

Noel Coward visited a provincial British town where a revival of "Bitter Sweet" was being played. Annoyed that no seat had been left for him by the management, he crisply informed the young woman in the box office: "I'm Noel Coward; I wrote the book, lyrics and score of this show."

"Really?" was the indifferent snapper. "Quite the little Ivor Novello, aren't you?"

"Who was that lady I saw you with last night?" is probably the best known old joke in show business . . . Only the other day we learned that it accidentally originated in an old minstrel show . . . When Mike Todd considered doing a play about Stephen Foster, he encountered its origin in his minstrel research . . . "Christie's Minstrels" was an annual event on the one-night circuits. Christie put his own name on Foster's tunes, which he bought for $50 . . . He was quite a ladies' man, too.

Christie was dating the wife of an End Man in the show . . . During the Afterpiece (which closed the performance) the husband finally hinted he was hep to the clandestine romance. He called across stage: "Who was that lady I saw you with last night?"

"That was no lady," nastied Christie, "that was your wife."

Mrs. Patrick Campbell, who walked with Royalty, had the retort wonderful when a restaurant flunky told her dogs were not welcome.

"My dog," regally replied La Campbell, "dines at Buckingham Palace! Can you say the same for the rest of your patrons?"

Lenora Corbett, the actress, sent this apology to a gentleman friend: "Dear Gerald: Do you remember the day we met outside my door? I had not seen you for quite a while. You came toward me with outstretched hands and beaming smile. I was in a dreadful hurry. 'Oh, Gerald,' I said, 'I wish you were a taxi!' You laughed and said how funny I was, but your arms dropped rather quickly. Months have passed since then. Gerald, will you forgive that naughty jest of mine if I tell you this morning as I left my house an empty cab slowly passed me by, and halfaloud I whispered: Oh, taxi, how I wish you were Gerald'!"

Columnist-historian A. Schlesinger, jr., noted: "Louis Johnson's economy drive played a crucial role in bringing about American defenselessness. But were strong voices (except those in the Alsops) raised against Johnson's policy at the time?"

That'll be news to the editors of Colliers. Louis Johnson tried to get them to unprint "Blueprint for Disaster" by the anemic-voiced W. Winchell.

Land Urged to Protect View

Representative Frances P. Bolton (R., Ohio) introduced a bill yesterday to authorize the Secretary of Interior to acquire 210 acres of land bordering the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway on the Potomac River side just south of Alexandria, Va.

Mrs. Bolton said she filed the measure at the request of the Mount Vernon Ladies Association, of which she is a vice regent.

The strip, comprising three separate strips, will be the site of apartment developments soon unless the bill passes, she said.

"The highway is a memorial to George Washington," she said. "We must protect the view of the Potomac which the highway always should have."

A portion of the land is owned by the Smoot Sand and Gravel Co.

The bill was sent to the House Public Works Committee where Chairman Whittington (D., Miss.) promised an early hearing.

Almost identical measures have been introduced in recent years, but were blocked on the House floor by single objectors.

Charges Denied

Unification Praised as Korea Aid

Charges that economies resulting from armed-forces unification have crippled United States troops in Korea were denied yesterday by the research director of the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report.

McCormick

"Nothing could be further from the truth," Robert L. L. McCormick told a Junior Chamber of Commerce luncheon at the Burlington Hotel. "The Tydings Act gave our Defense Department the machinery to coordinate and unify military operations—something which was sadly lacking in World War II."

Characterizing the Unification Act as one of the Hoover Commission's greatest achievements, McCormick said:

The Korean war, said the research director, "points up the urgent need for further action on the Hoover Commission recommendations.

Man Released After Quiz on May Murders

Omaha, July 20 (AP).—Harry Shamp, 25, of Omaha, who has been questioned about the slaying of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. May, 3d, of Alexandria, here in 1947, was released from the Douglas County Jail today.

County Attorney James J. Fitzgerald said he is "still certain that Shamp has knowledge as to the identification (Charles) McClelland's accomplices, but we had no evidence to connect Shamp directly with the May murders."

McClelland, 21-year-old carnival worker, now is serving a life sentence for the slayings. He was serving a term in the Colorado State Penitentiary on a bad check charge when he first admitted the slayings.

Mr. and Mrs. May were found shot to death at the edge of Omaha August 28, 1947. Later that day their blood-spattered car was found in Omaha.

Farmer Accused of Gouging Woman's One Good Eye

A 62-year-old farmer held under $1500 bond on mayhem charges yesterday, after a one-eyed woman accused him of gouging her good eye with an automobile key.

Wilbert W. Grayson, 62½ Myrtle st. ne., was held for the grand jury by Municipal Court Judge Thomas D. Quinn.

Lucy Kennard, 39, of 68 Myrtle st., ne., was led to the witnesses stand by friends and testified that she was having an argument with Grayson's wife on June 23, when Grayson walked up and hit her, with keys in his hand.

She said she wears an artificial eye and that Episcopal doctors have told her she may never again regain sight in her other eye.

"I smacked Lucy around," Grayson admitted, but he said she was insulting his wife.

Crosby Takes Us All On European Tour

—By John Crosby—

I DON'T know how many of you have been catching "This Is Bing Crosby," a 15-minute transcribed day-time show, dedicated to the proposition that every man, woman and child ought to drink more Minute Maid Orange Juice. Anyhow, Mr. C. has been devoting much of the quarter hour to a recital of his adventures in Europe with wit, charm and a surprising perceptiveness.

THE GROANER

If you can't fit Europe into your schedule this summer, the Crosby travel diary is about the best vicarious trip around. Even if you do manage to work in Europe this summer, you probably won't be invited, as was Crosby, to take pot luck with Prince Ali Khan and Princess Rita at their splendiferous little abode outside Paris. Pot luck with the Ali Khans, Crosby explained drily, was a production number out of Ziegfeld by Escoffier. Makes one wonder what areally formal dinner at their highnesses' is like.

The other day, Crosby took us all to the Paris version of "Annie Get Your Gun" which, he explained, Ethel Merman wouldn't even recognize. The French "Annie Get Your Gun," said Crosby, contains a Buffalo Bill who looks like Monsieur Beaucaire. Sitting Bull, he said, resembled a French pastry cook who had fallen into a flour barrel. The show also employed horses, mules and even elephants.

Crosby's eye for the odd anecdote, the irrelevant incident is very sharp indeed. If the voice ever wears out, I suspect he wouldn't have much trouble landing a job as a commentator. Anyway, this sort of thing is a welcome relief from the usual dreary flow of Hollywood trivia—the jokes about Bob Hope's waist line, for example—and it leads to the suspicion that Europe, given the proper build-up on the air, might conceivably be as interesting as the glamour citadel itself. I suggest all our comedians be shipped to Europe once a year to sweep the cobwebs out of their dialogue and change their points of view. Stay away from the London Palladium, though. Just enjoy yourselves and look around, boys. It'll be broadening for both of us.

GOT a couple developments here in the soap opera dodge. Teri Keane, who plays Chichi in "Life Can Be Beautiful," just got married to John Larkin, who is Miles Nelson in "Right to Happiness." I wish them both luck, especially Larkin, who will need it badly. Any man who marries a soap opera heroine is likely to be the victim of more accidents and strange diseases than inflict a hundred of the rest of us. I doubt that Larkin will get through the summer without breaking both his legs, being stricken with amnesia or going blind. Possibly all three.

Another interesting, though fairly ominous, development, is the announcement by Duell, Sloan & Pearce that they will publish "The Nora Drake Story." Nora, as any fool knows, is the Florence Nightingale of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

The soap opera is the closest thing to perpetual motion ever devised by mankind, and it is for this reason that I view the idea of inclosing Nora in the covers of a book with some misgiving. Books are a superannuated art from which clings persistently to its outmoded traditions, among which is the quaint notion that a book should have a beginning, a middle and—listen carefully, Nora—an end.

Soap opera, on the other hand, is inherently antagonistic to any sort of endings. There are no endings in soap opera, there are only an endless succession of beginnings.

Dinner Time in Montgomery County

City Folks Love Country Cooking

By Lucia Brown

COUNTRY cooking is beloved even in cities of a million population—especially if the city happens to be Washington!

Through the years, thousands of small-town boys and girls have flocked to the Capital to live. And they're happy to flock right back to the rural routes anytime a dinner, country-style, awaits them there.

Taking advantage of this taste, members of churches and organizations in the neighboring countryside often make money in the summer by cooking up a fine, big meal and inviting their city cousins to join them in eating it. Best known of these dinners is probably the one staged yearly by the Women's Board of the Montgomery County Hospital, at the Sherwood High School in Sandy Springs, Md.

Next Tuesday—July 25—is the date set for it this year and Montgomery kitchens are already abustle with activity. Hours for serving will be from 4 to 8 p. m. in the school gymnasium, some 20 miles from Washington.

Fragrant, deep-red country ham . . . crisp, brown fried chicken . . . Maryland beaten biscuit, shaped round like a ball . . . coleslaw made with old-fashioned boiled dressing . . . fluffy layer cakes . . . rich candies . . . homemade cookies . . . pickles . . . jellies.

That's what's cooking in Montgomery County, and what will be served or sold when the crowd gathers next Tuesday. They're preparing dinner for 2000, using their favorite recipes. Here are a few of them, as given by the Montgomery County cooks:

BAKED MARYLAND HAM

(Mrs. Ann Gilpin Boyd, Sandy Spring, Md.)

If your ham is as old as one year—and it isn't good until it is!—soak it overnight in a kettle full of water. Pour this off, and again cover the ham with water. Bring to a boil and then turn your fire low enough for the water to just simmer. Cook until the bones at the hock end begin to loosen and finally fall out. Another way to test for tenderness is to stick ham with long, pronged fork. Be careful not to cook too much as you will waste ham in carving.

Leave the ham in this water until cold. It will take overnight. Remove from water and skin it. Push whole cloves into the fat side until ham is covered. Make solution of 1 cup vinegar and 1 cup brown sugar. Pour this over your ham and put in slow oven to bake. Every few minutes, baste ham with liquid that has run off. Bake ham until it is a beautiful rich brown. Thoroughly chill before cutting, if you wish thin slices.

BOILED SALAD DRESSING

(Mrs. C. Willard Harvey, Brookesville, Md.)

3 eggs
2/3 cup sugar
2/3 cup vinegar
¾ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon black pepper
½ teaspoon mustard
3 tablespoons cornstarch or flour
2 cups water
3 tablespoons butter

Beat eggs. Mix in all other ingredients except butter on low heat. Stirring constantly, let boil until thick. Take from heat and stir in butter.

OLD-FASHIONED LEMON LAYER CAKE

(Mrs. Rogers S. Whiteford, Chevy Chase, Md.)

½ cup butter
2 cups sugar
4 eggs
3 cups flour
1 cup milk
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream the butter, add the sugar, and egg yolks, beaten light. Sift flour and baking powder together, then add to egg mixture alternately with the milk. Add vanilla. Fold in beaten whites. Bake in three lined and greased layer-cake pans.

LEMON FILLING

2 eggs
2 lemons (juice and grated rind)
1 tablespoon butter
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons hot water

Cook together in double boiler until thick. Spread between layers and cover top of cake with powdered sugar.

FAMOUS BUTTER CREAMS

(Dr. Katherine Chapman, Kensington, Md.)

2½ cups granulated sugar
3 heaping tablespoons cocoa
¾ cup water
1 inch square butter
½ teaspoon vanilla

Mix first three items and boil until sample forms soft ball when dropped in cold water. Pour on large platter. When fairly cool, beat in melted butter and vanilla. Beat with knife until it holds shape. Then drop from spoon on wax paper to harden.

DATE MACAROONS

(Mrs. Vestus C. Wilcox, Gaithersburg, Md.)

1 pound shredded dates
½ pound almonds, cut lengthwise, but not blanched
4 eggs, well beaten
1 cup granulated sugar

Stone dates, then weigh and chop. Cut almonds lengthwise. Beat whites of eggs until foamy. Add sugar and beat until stiff. Add dates, then almonds. Mix and drop mixture with teaspoon in small piles on tins ½-inch apart. Bake 50 minutes in slow oven (250 degrees Fahrenheit), or until dry.

Market Memo

Food Dealers Pledge Bounty For Weekend

"BOUNTIFUL supplies" was the refrain of food dealers yesterday in talking about prices for the coming weekend.

"There's so much available to eat, there's just no sense in these runs at the grocery," they reported irritably. "That's what sends prices up!"

VEGETABLES were an outstanding example of this bounty. Rated as "best buys" in this area were cabbage, snap beans, sweet corn, lettuce, cucumbers, peppers. Also a good buy at reasonable prices were beets, carrots, Eastern celery, onions, Eastern Shore cobbler potatoes. Tomato prices dropped at wholesale again, a fact that should be reflected at the retail level.

FRUITS AND MELONS in good supply include watermelons, canteloupes, plums and cherries, with blueberries still fairly abundant, too.

PORK LOIN prices have dropped 10 to 12 cents a pound at wholesale since last week, knocking off most of their previous rise. Other meat prices remain about the same as last week.

CHICKENS have advanced about 6 cents a pound in price on all grades, but are still a good buy compared with other meats. Dealers blame the price rise on the New York market, predict they'll go down again next week.

MAKE mine country-fried! That's the way the chicken will be at the Montgomery County Hospital picnic next Tuesday. And you'll get a sample of several frying methods. Some roll it in flour or meal seasoned with salt and pepper, before frying it golden brown in a skillet over low heat. Others dip it in sweet or buttermilk before rolling in the flour or meal

Your Figure, Madame

Stretch First, if You Hate to Get Up in the Morning

By Ida Jean Kain

STRETCHING is a tonic . . . and a natural in the good old summertime. So yawn and s-t-r-e-t-c-h luxuriously, first thing on waking in the morning.

"What's good about it?" you may think with a sleepy yawn. Well, for one thing, it will help you get out on the right side of the bed. A few minutes of stretching can make all the difference in the start of your day.

IDA JEAN KAIN

On waking, the circulation is sluggish . . . and the only natural thing to do, besides turning over and slipping back into slumber, is to stretch. That is nature's way of stirring the circulation into smooth action. A slow, prolonged stretch, with the gentle turning and muscle pulling that are part of it, contracts the muscles, squeezes out the old blood and lets new blood flow in. Circulation is stimulated and soon the body is purring smoothly.

ALL THIS stretching can be done right in bed. Just push the pillow aside, yawn, s-t-r-e-t-c-h and p-u-l-l. . . arms out at the sides (straight up if space permits), legs pushing down. Then stretch on the bias by crossing left leg over right and stretching left arm out to the side and up, and p-u-l-l. Reverse and stretch all along the other side. Three times each side.

Between stretches let go completely . . . go limp, yawn. Then stretch again. (If you yawn as much reading this as I am writing it, you're bound to feel relaxed!)

If there are kinks through the shoulder region, work on that spot . . . raise right arm up, lifting right shoulder off the bed, stretch arm high, then drop it limply . . . then raise left arm, lifting that shoulder off the bed, stretch and drop arm limply. Do this about three times with each arm.

Stretching is a natural . . . it tones and refreshes.

Follow with a luke-cool shower—not icy cold on a muggy day for that gets up too much internal steam. Take time for a balanced breakfast . . . and happy day, that will give the energy needed to stand up to the heat.

Alva Gimbel, Merchant Tycoon's Wife, Fills Life With Horses and Children

Alva Gimbel, the Boss's Lady

By Tex McCrary and Jinx Falkenburg

ALVA GIMBEL has suffered more broken bones as a horsewoman than most veteran riders in Madison Square Garden's Rodeo—but her worst accident happened while she was pruning roses. As she stepped back to survey her handiwork, she fell into the deep end of an empty swimming pool. New bones were smashed . . . but as she lay there in agony, she remembered lessons learned but never used during wartime work with the American Women's Volunteer Services — don't lose your head—don't move air raid victims hastily, for fear of internal injuries.

"I called to my gardener and told him where to phone for an ambulance—of course I remembered the telephone number! And when they came, I gave them directions about how to lift me—of course I did not lose consciousness!"

Maybe we embroidered that story a little, but still it fits her like a wedding ring. Few men have a more compelling "voice of command," for themselves and for others, than Alva.

AFTER that first date with Bernard at a Penn-Cornell football game, she took careful aim on him for a husband—but she knew, like Annie Oakley, that "you can't get a man with a gun." The Gimbel clan had just opened a mammoth store in Manhattan; shrewdly she went down to their store and enrolled for a course in knitting — she knew that if Bernard were interested, he'd be down from his executive office for a visit. He came, he saw, he was conquered. They have been married for 38 years.

THE driving energy that crackles in her black eyes —until a grin relaxes them—has found outlets in campaigns for the Soldiers - Sailors - Airmen's Club, the AWVS and the Campfire Girls. And none of those campaigns was taken on instead of raising her five children.

When their oldest son, Bruce, who ferried planes for the Air Force during the war, first wanted to learn to fly, Bernard frowned and was against it; said Alva: "He is not too young—if he shows interest and aptitude, let him learn!"

Her twin sons, just out of Yale, headed now for Africa, were raised the same way—she taught them to try anything once; Bernard, who did so much to help Gene Tunney become a champion, taught his children the toughness they need to try something a second time. And both parents are so proud of children and grandchildren alike, it is a miracle that both generations have not been spoiled.

ALVA has always been able to tell her twins apart—except once. When David and Peter went into the Army, of course they both had their pictures taken in uniform and sent home to the folks.

"I looked through the pictures and picked out the two I liked best, and put them in frames on the piano in the living room. Before they left for Japan, they both got leave to come home—Peter came home first. And as he walked through the living room, with his arm around my waist, he stopped and looked at those two pictures I had put on the piano:

"'Mom . . . please understand that I'm not complaning, but just for accuracy's sake, you see those two pictures on the piano? Well, both of them are David!'"

Federation Urges Members To Resist Red Propaganda

DEPARTMENT chairmen of the General Federation of Women's Clubs have appealed to clubwomen throughout the country to "stand fast against the insidious Communist propaganda leveled against the United States because of its stand in the Korean situation."

The chairmen made their statement at conclusion of their meeting in Washington last week with the Federation president, Mrs. Hiram Cole Houghton.

The club leaders advised women to resist propaganda which seeks to "divide and conquer," . . . first by creating distrust and dissension among nations, and second by undermining the confidence of the people in their government."

"We are not sanguine over a speedy settlement of the matter," the message continues. "The target is not South Korea, it is the world."

Finally, the department chairmen called for a bi-partisan foreign policy throughout the current crisis. "The men who are carrying the ball will do a better job for us if they feel a united support and understanding of their problems."

Club officials who joined in issuing the statement were Mrs. Frederic W. Beggs of Ridgewod, N. J., chairman of international relations; Mrs. E. Lee Ozbirn of Oklahoma City, Okla., chairman of public affairs and dean of department chairman; Miss Chloe Gifford of Lexington, Ky., chairman of education, and Mrs. P. A. Petitt of Paola, Kans., chairman of fine arts.

Picnic Time Means Open Season On Stains From Bottled Beverages; First Aid Should Be Applied at Once

SUMMERTIME is picnic time, which also means it's open season on stains from mustard, soft drinks, fruits and such. A. L. G. writes:

DEAR ANNE:

A bottle of cola beverage was turned over on my dress at a picnic. I haven't done anything to the large spot yet for fear of setting it. What would you suggest? A. L. G., Washington.

This is one of those times when a hasty step would have been a wise one—that is, if you'd taken the right step!

Miss Margaret Furry, textile chemist at the Department of Agriculture, says first aid should be applied to soft drink stains immediately by sponging with clear, cold water while they're still fresh and moist. The summer sun may have set and darkened the stain by now. It's a good thing, though, that you haven't laundered the dress in the usual way as soap and pressing set such stains.

As soon as possible, rub glycerine or soapless shampoo into the spot, then sponge with cold water. Sometimes it helps to apply a few drops of vinegar after the glycerine or shampoo treatment. Rinse well afterward with cold water. Try to get out every bit of the stain that will come out before you wash it with soap.

DEAR ANNE:

Is there a cleaning establishment in Washington specializing in cleaning suede garments, and guaranteeing the work? I have an expensive suede coat and was warned, in buying it, to send it only to such a cleaner with such a guarantee, but can find no one to care for it.

M. H. M., Washington, D. C.

Even firms that specialize in cleaning suede seldom guarantee the job. There's always the chance that the suede will lose color, I am told. Respraying is then necessary and the shade may not be exactly as it was originally. However, a representative of a Bethesda firm well-known for this work tells me results are almost invariably good. They have two men who specialize in suede cleaning but they also have lots of suede to clean, so you have to wait 4 or 5 weeks to get your garment back. You can reach this concern by telephoning Shepherd 2330.

DEAR ANNE:

What is the best care that I can give to a green plastic lounge chair and hammock that we recently purchased?

M. C. L., Silver Spring, Md.

Such upholstery is quite practical and doesn't require much care under ordinary conditions. Clean it by wiping with damp cloth. If necessary, use mild soapsuds and remove with damp cloth. To prevent cracking, follow the washing with a thin coat of petroleum jelly.

DEAR ANNE:

A hole as big as a nickel has been been burned in the leather top of our coffee table. Is there any way I can repair this at home or camouflage it so that it will be less noticeable?

W. G., Bethesda, Md.

Here's a neat trick for hiding the damage: Get a candle in a color to match the leather. Melt the wax, pour it into the hole, and smooth it out before the wax has a chance to harden. If the edges of the burn are black and crisp, you may want to trim them a little before pouring in the wax.

DEAR ANNE:

Could you please tell me if there is anything I can put in the water when I wash a chintz skirt so it will keep its gloss? A. V. S., Washington.

There's really no magic potion that will accomplish this happy result. Even chintz that is supposed to have a permanent glaze sometimes loses it. Just be careful in washing it, using mild soap and lukewarm water and refraining from scrubbing the surface directly. Before ironing, let it dry, then sprinkle thoroughly so that it will become quite damp again. Press on the right side with a warm iron until completely dry.

What Makes Good Lamps? Schools of Thought Dispute

By Ann Pringle

There's a lot of healthy discord among designers about what constitutes a good portable lamp. It's a controversy that could really be extended to many pieces of furniture, since the elements of disagreement represent two distinct schools of thought in furniture design.

One group holds that lamps can and should be art objects. These designers feel that modern chairs, tables and larger pieces of furniture have become so plain, simple and practical that the homemaker feels the need of a more artistic touch in her rooms. Warmth and beauty can be added by means of lamps, they say. Lamps with sculptural bases, made of fine materials and designed with an eye to beauty, fill an emotional need which the "functional" lamp does not.

On the other side of the fence we have several modern architects, plus a group of modern designers. They say that a lamp's main function is to give proper light, and that the designer must consider this above all in his work. A flexible shaft that can be bent to many angles, and universal joints which allow the shaft and the bulb fixture to twist from side to side are prominent features of this type of lamp.

The practical thinkers also stress beauty as a consideration in lamp design. But they object to mating art objects with electrical fixtures. A lamp may throw light on a piece of sculpture or a figurine, they say, but it should not be attached to one. Instead of wiring a vase or piece of sculpture to make a lamp, they urge lamp designers to choose materials which are warm and appealing, and to make sure that their designs fulfill functional needs and artistic ones at the same time.

It is hard to serve these two masters, function and beauty. Some lamps on the market today manage, however. In particular, I can cite a simple desk lamp which has a cylindrical shade of white translucent plastic, wrapped around three slender wood legs. Its appeal, to my mind, is more immediate and lasting than some of the fancy lamps with sculptured metal or ceramic bases. As a general rule, I would say that in buying lamps you'll be less apt to go wrong if you stick to the simple, practical type. If you want to go fancy, buy your lamp as carefully as you would a painting or a piece of sculpture. You want to be sure it will continue to please you.

Colombia Celebrates National Fete

GALA festivities yesterday marked Colombia's national holiday. Colombians and friends of Colombia, members of the Casa Colombia Club, gave a reception and dance at the United Nations Club. Flowers in national colors of red, yellow and blue decorated the clubhouse rooms, and Latin-American music was furnished by Valencia and his orchestra.

The Ambassador of Colombia and Senora de Zuleta-Angel, who are remaining at Spring Lake, N. J., until the end of August, were unable to attend. Guests, numbering 200, included embassy staff members and their wives, diplomats of other Latin-American countries and members of residential and official society.

In the receiving line were Senorita Marion Forero, who is chief of the Pan American library and provisional president of the Casa Colombia Club; Miguel Aranguren, provisional secretary of the club; Miss Emma Buenaventura, treasurer, and Mrs. Chase Donaldson, who was in charge of arrangements for the dance.

Colombia's national holiday dates back to July 20, 1810, when Simon Bolivar liberated the country from Spain.

Woman Diplomat Wins Promotion

MRS. Anita Luisa Branger, who has been cultural attache at the Venezuelan Embassy for about a year, has been promoted to the position of third secretary. She will remain in Washington. A versatile young diplomat, Mrs. Branger has won laurels as artist, writer and sportswoman. Recently she broke a world record in altitude, flying her own Piper Cub, and she is out to break more altitude records.

Although it is said that women diplomats are here to stay, they are slow in coming to Washington. Diplomats by the hundreds are listed in the Blue Book, and of these just eight are women. This includes Mme. Pandit, Ambassador of India. The other seven hold posts as second, third secretaries and attaches.

Our Street Is Paved

Today the city paved our street . . . And now it looks real good . . . And now we speak with special pride . . About our neighborhood . . . The dust and dirt are there no more . . . The holes have disappeared . . . And less will be the accidents . . . That we have always feared . . . It is a great improvement and . . . Is beautiful to see . . . And naturally it benefits . . . The whole community . . . Of course it cost some money and . . . We have to foot the bill . . . And some of us may swallow it . . . As quite a bitter pill . . . But it provides a picture that . . . Is practical and new . . . And every piece of property . . . Is raised in value too.

MRS. EUGENE S. MARTIN

Miss Hagner, Eugene Martin Are Married

Miss Isabella Hagner, daughter of Mrs. Randall H. Hagner, and the late Mr. Hagner, became the bride yesterday of Eugene S. Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Pidel Martin of Berlin, N. H. The ceremony took place in St. John's Church, LaFayette Square with the rector, the Rev. C. Leslie Glenn, officiating. Dr. Glenn, spending the summer at York Harbor, Me., flew down to officiate at the wedding and returned immediately afterward.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Randall H. Hagner, jr. She wore a light blue chiffon and lace gown, ankle length, with a close blue hat trimmed in pink flowers and face veil. She carried a white prayerbook to which were fastened a spray of gardenias.

Sister Matron of Honor

Mrs. Moran McConihe in navy blue sheer over white with a blue bandeau and veil, was her sister's matron of honor. Little Virginia Hagner, niece of the bride, was flower girl, wearing a white organdy frock and carrying an old-fashioned nosegay.

Gerson Nordlinger served as best man. Ushers were Paul Wedel, Clark Land, Moran McConihe, Alex Hagner and Thomas Moorhead.

Members of the immediate families and close friends of the young couple who attended the ceremony were also present at the small reception held at Whitestone Farm, Mrs. Hagner's home near Rockville, Md. Later Mr. and Mrs. Martin left for a Canadian wedding trip, stopping two days in Berlin, N. H., where Mr. Martin's parents will give a reception in their honor.

To Live in Tucson

They will take a cruise with friends in August and will live in Tucson, Ariz., next winter.

The bride's family has long been prominent in Washington and the real estate firm of Randall H. Hagner & Co. is one of the city's oldest. Yesterday the office closed at 3:30 to enable the members of the firm, some of whom have known the bride since she was born, to attend the ceremony.

Mrs. Schmidt Leaving

Mrs. J. H. Schmidt was the guest of honor at a recent farewell luncheon given for her at Water Gate Inn by her office associates of the administrative offices of the United States Court. Mrs. Schmidt is leaving Washington to join her husband, Lieutenant Schmidt, USA, at his new assignment in Dayton, Ohio.

Miriam Tittman To Wed Aug. 12

MISS MIRIAM TROWBRIDGE TITTMANN has selected Saturday, August 12, as the date of her marriage to Dr. Robert E. Moreng of Grantwood, N. J. The ceremony will take place at the Connecticut ave. home of the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Trowbridge Tittmann whose marriage took place in the same house. The Rev. George Tittman, cousin of Miss Tittmann, will officiate at 12:30 and a small wedding breakfast for the family and close friends will follow. Dr. Moreng will take his bride to Fargo, N. Dak., to live.

Hat Show Preludes Benefit

YOU can look, but you must not touch!

That was the theme of the hat show given by the Women's Board of Montgomery County General Hospital yesterday at the Manor Club.

There were felt, straw and crocheted hats galore at the hat show and tea, but the ladies attending the tea could not buy. They were urged to make mental notes of the hats they wanted, however, which they could buy at the hospital board's supper on July 25. These hats were donated by department stores and millinery shops in Washington and Silver Spring.

To gain admittance to the tea yesterday, the women had to bring a piece of bric-a-brac, old or new, which will be sold also at the supper on Tuesday.

Mrs. Frank Palmer was hostess at the tea. Her committee, who also modeled hats, included Mrs. James Valliant, Mrs. Mark Ziegler, Mrs. Dorsey Downey, Mrs. Gene Archer, Miss Janice Palmer, Mrs. Thomas Callahan, Mrs. H. T. Vann, Mrs. William Martin, Mrs. Brooke Johns and Mrs. William J. Buehm.

Local Zonta Club Leader Chosen for UNESCO Seminar

THE Zonta Club of Washington announces that Mrs. Helen T. Steinbarger, a former president and a member of the board of directors, has been selected by the U. S. Department of State to be one of three librarians who will represent the United States at the UNESCO Seminar on Libraries in Adult Education.

The meeting will be held from July 24 to August 19, 1950, in Malmo, Sweden, where there are excellent opportunities for the practical study of library adult education activities. Mrs. Steinbarger is well known to the citizens of Washington, for she holds the position of consultant in adult education at the Public Library on Mount Vernon Square.

The seminar, which will be limited to 50 participants, three from each country, will cover a discussion of library adult techniques, methods and policies to help stimulate library educational services in all member states. Particular emphasis will be given to the organization and operation of library film services and the use of films, records and radio in adult education.

Mrs. Steinbarger and the other two American delegates will depart for Sweden shortly after attending the Sixty-ninth Annual Confernece of the American Library Association being held in Cleveland, Ohio, July 16-22.

The Zonta Club is an international organization and its membership is composed of outstanding women in the professions and in industry. Consequently, Mrs. Steinbarger while in Sweden expects to visit Zonta Clubs in Malmo, Gavle, Gothenburg and Stockholm. She also plans to visit Zonta Clubs in Copenhagen, Denmark and in Oslo, Norway, besides attending meetings of other overseas clubs. She is expected to return to Washington, D. C., in early September.

Your Baby

Dad's Interest Is Essential To Children

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

RECENTLY, I talked to a young couple who were expecting their first baby. The young husband said to me, "Ever since I knew we were to have a baby I have been reading your column." That pleased me no end, for it is the spirit that makes for successful parenthood. The father wants to know, to learn. He doesn't take his role casually.

There are too many fathers who, after viewing the new baby in the hospital and remarking humorously upon its ugliness, and deigning to carry it home, literally dump it in the mother's lap. "Here, it's yours," they say, just as if this were a piece of merchandise for whose purchase and care the mother was entirely responsible.

A father can carry this attitude through life, a sort of hands-off, let-mother-do-it one. Such fathers enjoy their children when they are all dressed and clean; take pride in their achievements, without turning a hand to make them clean or to polish off their talents.

Parenthood Is Two-Way Game

PARENTHOOD is a two-way game. Children need their fathers in times of stress and strain as well as when the sun is shining. They need to be penalized by the father, if he happens to be the injured party in any situation as well as praised and applauded by him when they act in commendable ways.

The atmosphere of the home, compounded of a parents' love for each other and their obvious interest in their children, if of vital importance to the child's happiness and well being.

To this end young fathers have to learn to know how children act and why. They should be exposed to child-training groups as well as to child-training and parental education literature. Then they will not, upon provocation, come forth with ancient opinions they have picked up heavens knows where, and stand upon them because having uttered them they cannot without loss of face, back down.

Parents Must Work Together

IF PARENTS work together to discover what makes the baby tick, if they take an equal share in rearing the baby, (even if not always doing the same tasks)—they have solved one of the big obstacles to a successful marriage.

Two parents pulling in opposite directions, with the baby in the middle, are doomed to fail and ruin the child in the process. Parenthood is a big business and demands the intelligent cooperation of both its partners.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

BASIL FOMEEN, plaintive Russian accordianist, is coming back to the Carlton Congo Room next Monday. He left there last December after a record 45-week run.

Basil Fomeen

There will be a new vocalist, Bea Croft, with the seven-piece band. She's a Texan who entered the world of show business as the Maid of Cotton.

Fomeen's music is plaintive to the point of being oriental. For dancing, it is ideal. As he puts it, his music is "soft, smooth, with the rhythm felt but not heard." The accordian has attracted him strongly since he first heard it. That was three days after he landed in America, at a vaudeville show where Phil Baker played.

He immediately began learning to play and formed an accordian orchestra. But talking pictures put an end to the multiple squeeze boxes and Fomeen became accordian arranger and played for Victor.

Then after a stint as first man for Meyer Davis, he got his big chance to go into the Savoy Plaza Cafe Lounge as leader. Since then the Waldorf Astoria, Pierre and Ritz Carlton are some of the top spots he's played.

Fomeen mixes many a style into his repertoire. He brings the popular classics in whenever possible. Chopin Walzes, Gershwin numbers, Tchaikowsky melodies are played along with the American dance tunes. In addition there are Sambas, Choras, Boleros, Guarachas, Paso Doblos, and tangos. And Fomeen likes to sandwich a few of his own compositions in between.

MATT WINDSOR was pleased as punch with his new "big name policy," but he didn't know how to follow the Jones Brothers' run with anything comparable. He asked the Brothers for their opinion, and got an enthusiastic description of the New England combo, Clarence Jackson and his four notes of rhythm.

That decided Windsor, and the Jackson group will open Monday at the Windsor Room. The Jones Brothers are staying over to help them celebrate opening night. Patrons Monday will hear both groups, plus singers June Beverly and humorous Louise Potter. Harvey Chown continues with his piano boogie woogie and jive singing.

The Clarence Jackson foursome is like the Jones family in style. All of them double as singers and comedians. Their instruments are piano, bass, guitar and bonga drum. Jackson's Four Notes of Rhythm were recently picked by the night club columnists of four Boston papers as the best small combo in New England.

One on the Aisle—

The Warner Goes History-Conscious

By Richard L. Coe

THE WARNER'S "Fifty Years Before Your Eyes" is the second feature in as many months to take a backward glance via the newsreel files.

Covering a larger canvas than the March of Time's "The Golden Twenties," this naturally has to do a greater job of compression. This one covers from McKinley's inauguration and Queen Victoria's funeral to an alert but comfortable United States of 1950 singing "The Star Spangled Banner."

As the Time people did, the Warner scrapbook gets spoken commentary from familiar voices. Godfrey, Quentin Reynolds, H. V. Kaltenborn, Clem McCarthy, Milton Cross and others set the scenes for you.

Covering an eventful and increasingly documented 50 years in 70 minutes is naturally only a trip over scattered highspots. It is the commentary and editing that is important in such pictures as this. How well "Fifty Years Before Your Eyes" does its job is a matter of personal knowledge and opinion. For me, "The Golden Twenties" did a far better job even though—and probably because—its sights weren't so high.

The start, for instance, gives you the landing of the Pilgrims in a strictly studio-made sequence. The sound track tells us that they came here for religious freedom, a simplification that typifies the entire soundtrack. Not until the staged sequences of early America are out of the way, do we settle down to the actual clips.

These are, of course, fascinating: the struggles of Wilson, the activity of Teddy Roosevelt, the welcomes for Gertrude Ederle and Lindbergh, the days of World War I and the global struggle that's still raging, the movie people of the day and the fashions that now seem so laughable, the Hindenburg disaster, Mayor La Guardia's comic strip readings, FDR's funeral and the Battle of London.

As with all snapshots, the commentary is pure hindsight, and it struck me several times how confusing hindsight can be. Hindenburg's rise to the German presidency, for example, was not as a militarist, though the goose-stepping shots make it seem as the soundtrack says.

There is also a tendency in this Warner release to insert voices and music where originally neither were. Teddy Roosevelt's voice is there and so is the speaker in action; but they clearly don't fit. And when finally the music does, once in a while, let up, one realizes anew the golden of silence.

"Fifty Years Before Your Eyes" is interesting even though, by the nature of things, it bites off more than it can chew.

As melodrama it's average and seems mighty movie-like after the newsreel clips of "Fifty Years Before Your Eyes."

BURT LANCASTER will make one performance only tonight at the Warner, taking a bow from the stage after a special "three-for-your-money" showing of his newest, "The Flame and the Arrow," which is next for the Warner . . . The picture will go on at 8:50, with Lancaster and Nick Cravat saying hello at 11, with "Jewell Robber" in between . . . Cravat is Burt's former circus partner an dthe fellow he took a turn of the vaudeville houses with a while ago . . . He's also in the picture and the acrobatics they do in it are just dressed-up versions of the razzle-dazzle they used in the circus before Burt hit Broadway in "A Sound of Hunting," which took him to the movies.

BOTH the Dupont and the Little change bills today . . . Up at the Dupont the picture will be "D.O.A.," a murder yarn wherein Edmond O'Brien shows you what might happen to a notary public . . . And the Little is reviving two classics from the imagination of Robert J. Flaherty, the "Louisiana Story" man: "Tabu," about the South Seas, and "Nanook of the North," one of the all-time greats of documentary pictures.

Detroit to Ban Sale Of 'Subversive' Papers

Detroit, July 20 .—Sale of "subversive newspapers and literature" will be banned from Detroit newsstands after 4:30 p. m. Friday.

Mayor Albert Cobo said today he will sign at that time a resolution approved by the City Council giving the ban the effect of law.

HERE TODAY: Burt Lancaster, one of the movies' fastest-raising males in the postwar crop, pays a Washington visit today. He'll be on the stage of the Warner at 11 tonight after a preview showing of his newest, "The Flame and the Arrow." With Burt will be his circus and now movie partner, Nick Cravat

Foolish Fun 'Irma's' Western Trip

FUN AND Foolishness is rampant in "My Friend Irma Goes West," the Palace follow-up to the successful comedy with two less words in the title.

Once again Marie Wilson is complicating the already dishevveled lives of Diana Lynn, Dean Martin, John Lund and Jerry Lewis. Corinne Calvet has joined the troupe as a glamorous French import and what looks like a movie contract for Dean turns out to be a worthless paper signed by an escapee from an asylum.

While I recall not caring particularly for "My Friend Irma," I seem either to have improved or degenerated so far as this close sequel is concerned. It's important to go along completely with the nonsensical air of all concerned if you want to get at the laughs in this one.

Jerry Lewis is, I THINK, rather funny if you're in that foolish frame of mine. His approach to comedy is to give you a sort of slicked-up village idiot, a fellow who sells blankets in an Indian town, plays canasta with a friendly monkey and in general behaves as one you should be sorry for. But he does make you laugh and that, I presume, is what the chucklers came for yesterday at the Palace.

Martin has "Baby, Obey Me," "I'll Always Love You" and "Fiddle and Gittar Band" to keep him singing, Marie blows up a pressure cooker and misses a couple of transcontinental trains and Lund gives you his version of the Broadway wiseguy.

At the Capitol

Williams and Johnson Kindle The Old Spark at Sun Valley

By Orval Hopkins
Post Reporter

THERE is, doubtless, a term other than "summer entertainment" for movies like "The Duchess of Idaho," which is now at the Capitol, but I'm a little tied up here and am not going to think of one. Suffice it to say, that what with Esther Williams, the swimmer; Van Johnson, the orchestra leader; John Lund, the railroad scion, and assorted other talent rushing off to Sun Valley, what with Lena Horne and Eleanor Powell showing up quite fortuitously, and what with Technicolor, things are shiny indeed at the Capitol.

Joe Pasternak, who produced this MGM bauble, could have done this one with his eyes shut, he has turned out so many heretofore. In fact, it's not at all unlikely that he did have his eyes shut.

A large crowd of what I took to be mostly young folk tittered happily through the entire movie. As it says on a publicity thing I have here, there is dancing, singing, swimming, skiing, shooting, ballet, golf, ice-skating, trout-fishing, bowling, square dancing and acting in this film. The final item is the only one you could question and it would probably be out of place anyhow.

Miss Williams does two almost interminable swimming production numbers, Johnson is pleasant, Lund is sort of grimly handsome about it all, and Paula Raymond, who is a kind of associate love interest, still looks like Gloria Swanson, if you'll permit a re-issue of a remark made here a couple of weeks ago. Connie Haines puts her little heart into a couple of rather low-caste songs, and Lena Horne sings a number called "Baby, Come Out of the Clouds."

High spot of the movie, for my taste at any rate, was the dancing of Eleanor Powell, who seems to have come back to the films after a long hiatus. Miss Powell's performance is on a high professional level and it is this corner's hope that we'll be seeing more of her again.

Peggy Ryan and Ray McDonald, dancers, top the stage bill at the Capitol. I'm afraid they, in turn, are topped by a mad young fellow who calls himself Leo de Lyon, for reasons which I'm sure he is keeping to himself. Leo does some fairly humorous impressions, but happily the meat of his act are two or three routines apparently of his own invention. He's quite a funny young man. Others on the bill are Gautier's Steeplechase and Martin & Florenz, a puppet number.

"DUCHESS OF IDAHO." M-G-M release produced by Joe Pasternak for Robert Z. Leonard. Screen play by Dorothy Cooper and Jerry Davis. Musical numbers by Al Rinker, Floyd Huddleston, Henry Nemo, Lee Pearl. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard. At the Capitol.
